ED MAYS SAYS HE CAME TO CITY WITH $1,000,000

On Stand in Continental Life Case He Tells of Business Career in Arkansas and St. Louis.

CITES HUGE PROFITS IN CLAYTON BANK

Went Into Insurance Firm in 1922, Investing About $75,000 When Assets Were $4,000,000.

Ed Mays, president of the Continental Life Insurance Co. and the Grand National Bank, told the story of his business career in Circuit Judge Ryan's court this afternoon. He was the first witness for his insurance company in, its contest against the insolvency and dissolution suit brought against it by the State Insurance Department.

Beginning with his boyhood on an Arkansas farm he traced his activities in banking and barrel stave manufacturing at Leslie, Ark., leading up to his coming to St. Louis in 1921, and his expansion here into banking and ultimately to control of the Continental Life.

Came Here "With Million."

"I was successful in the manufacturing business in Arkansas," Mays said, "and when I came to St. Louis I was supposed to be worth a million dollars. I didn't owe a cent and I think I was worth a million."

In the pending suit State Insurance Superintendent R. Emmet O'Malley alleges the insurance company is insolvent and has been mismanaged. He is asking the court to turn control of it over to the Insurance Department. The company has nearly $100,000,000 of insurance in force and lists its assets at about $17,000,000.

Judge Permits Story.

Tall and dar[illegible] brows, nattily dressed in gray, Mays was a striking figure as he took the witness stand. He was asked by his counsel, Theodore Rassieur, to tell the story of his early life in Arkansas. This was objected to by counsel for the Insurance Department as immaterial, but Judge Ryan ruled that since large amounts of Arkansas securities were among the insurance company's assets he would hear the story of Mays' activities in that State.

Mays said he was 50 years old and that he was born on a farm in Arkansas and lived on a farm until he was 21. At the age of 21 he was elected Circuit Clerk of Searcy County and served two years. Then he attended the University of Arkansas for one term. In 1907 he obtained employment in a bank at Leslie, Ark., and soon became its cashier.

At Leslie, in the timber country or Northern Arkansas, he became interested in stave manufacturing and soon acquired large interests in that business, which, he said, proved to be highly profitable. He still has interests there.

Deal in St. Louis County.

He said that he and his associates purchased the Trust Co. of St. Louis Count yin 1922 for $125 a share, paying about $150,000 for it, and converted it into the F rst National Bank of Clayton, whose stock they later sold for $800 a share. He said he received an average of $32,000 a year in dividends from the Clayton bank and that it had no losses whatever while he was connected with it.

Turning to the Continental Life Insurance Co., Mays said that he and his associates first became interested in it in 1922 when it was moved from Kansas City to St. Louis. His investment in its at that time was about $75,000, he said, and it had about $4,000,000 in assets. In 1924, the First National Life Insurance Co. of Pierre, S. D., was brought to St. Louis and marged with Continental, he continued.

At Edwards' Invitation.

He said he came to St. Louis at the invitation of B. F. Edwards, a St. Louis banker, and that he and Edwards organized the National City Bank, each putting in $60,000. They sold out shortly afterward and bought the New Market Bank, which they converted into the Missouri National Bank. They moved it to Grand avenue, acquired the Grand Avenue Bank, and later formed the present Grand National Bank, which Mays now controls.

Powell McHaney, counsel for the Insurance Department, announced yesterday, at the close of the fourteenth day of the trial, that he had completed presentation of testimony in support of allegations of insolvency and mismanagement, but Rassieur said he wished to cross-examine two or three of the Department's witnesses before begin-

HITLER REVIEWS HIS YEAR IN POWER, DENIES THREAT TO AUSTRIA OR FRANCE

Warns Russia Against Communist Propagandizing and Praises Italy, Poland and Great Britain.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Jan. 30. — Chancellor Hitler on the first anniversary of his assumption of power, said today that humanity had entered on a period of "searching for timely ideas and realizations that might give humanity a new well-being."

His declaration was made in a speech to the Reichstag assembled in the Kroll Opera House.

He said Germany had no intentions of violating the security of Austria.

He said his administration had "removed, in one year, a world of conceptions and institutions and put others in their places."

He said there had been misery in Germany before his assumption of power, but that now humanity was seeking timely ideas for a new well-being.

Effect of World War.

This process, he went on, was hastened by the World War, which, as far as Germany was concerned, "undermined the stability of authority of leaders of the then Reich and, by the dictate of Versailles, destroyed the independence and freedom of the Reich."

He condemned the party bickerings following the establishment of the German republic, saying:

"The bourgeois democracy allied itself with Marxian internationalism and brought forth a series of cabinets which squandered the nation's economic and political capital.

"Everything was turned topsy-turvy. What was bad became good and vice versa.

"Heroes were despised; cowards extolled. Honest men were punished; lazy ones rewarded.

"The political and cultural life became atomized. The authority of leaders became undermined.

"It is the unique merit of Nazism to have prevented a total collapse."

Praises Associates.

Hitler paid tribute to his coworkers for their sacrifices to "liberate the German people from the madness which would have delivered 30,000,000 to starvation."

Then he made the customary Nazi argument against the Versailles treaty, saying that Communism had cleverly seized upon the situation developing in Germany as a result of the peace treaty in order to prepare for a Communist world revolution.

"Thus," he said, "the Nazi movement deserves not only praise by the German people but by the entire world for stopping a development which would have given a death blow to all hopes for betterment."

He said that what had replaced the old system was democracy in the best sense of the word, namely service to the people in accordance with the people's will.

"The racial ideas underlying Nazism," said Hitler, "do not mean contempt for other peoples but rather a natural respect for others."

Germany, he added, had millions of the best people who desired work and who had developed their spiritual and physical faculties and had a soil capable of increasing its output.

Given an authoritative government and the confidence of the people, Hitler declared, the problems of Germany could be solved.

Ending of Class Struggle.

Turning to the problem of capital and labor, Hitler said:

"We have laid the foundations for an order in which the brute force of the economically stronger gives place to the higher interests of the community of all engaged in creative work."

He believed that by the Nazi program of smashing the organizations of employers and workers class struggle would be annihilated.

Regarding religion, Hitler declared:

"By removing political organizations we have strengthened religious institutions. We all expect that by the union of Protestant state churches and faiths in one evangelical Reich church we will give real satisfaction to the yearnings of those who thought they saw in the incoherency of Protestant life a weakening of power of the Evangelical faith."

Tirade Against Monarchism.

Hitler delivered a tirade against monarchism, saying:

"I desire herewith to protest against the thesis that Germany can be happy again only under its hereditary rulers.

"No, we are one people, and we desire to live in one Reich. Despite all the appreciation of the values of monarchy, and all the devotion to the really great Kaisers and Kings in our history, the question of the final form which the state is to take is today outside all discussion.

"Whoever may finally be the nation's head will receive his call solely from the German people and will be responsible to them alone.

"The Nazi party can, under no

MAN, 59, SHOOTS MOTHER, 79, DEAD, THEN KILLS SELF

Bodies of John J. Haller and Mrs. Dora Haller Found in Flat When Police Break Into Place.

John J. Haller, 59-year-old door-to-door salesman, shot and killed his mother, Mrs. Dora Haller, 79, then ended his own life last night or early today in their four-room flat at 3340A Iowa avenue.

Their bodies were found by policemen who broke into the flat at 10:30 a. m., after members of the family of Mrs. Christina Franke, resident of the downstairs flat and owner of the building, had noticed that the lights upstairs were burning, that the doors were locked, and that there was none of the usual morning activity within.

Mrs. Haller, whose husband, John, died in December, 1931, was found in night clothing on the floor of the scrupulously neat kitchen, her head against the coal range. A bloodstain on the tablecloth a few feet away indicated the possibility that she had first fallen there, then had collapsed on the floor. She was shot in the right cheek.

Haller's body, fully clothed, lay on the bed in an adjoining room, the feet touching the floor. At his feet was a .38-caliber revolver from which four shots had been fired. He had been shot once in the left chest.

Two Notes Explain Tragedy.

In another bedroom policemen found an open trunk from which insurance policies and other papers had been taken and piled in an upper tray. On top of them lay an envelope addressed "Letter to the Police." Within were two notes.

The longer note was as follows:

To Whom It May Concern:

THE REASONS.

Inability to Earn.
Lots of Bad Luck.
Fast Going Blind.

Bury my good mother in Grave 3, lower half of 79, Section 8, Valhalla Cemetery. Cremate my body and bury the ashes in the grave, too.

Let Mr. Hans Schmitt (undertaker) do the work. He done a fine job of my good father.

Be careful about expenses, as there is only $750 in money and insurance. Two small policies in Metropolitan. Small premiums on both. Give the furniture, household goods and clothing to the Volunteers of America to give to the needy.

Good health, good luck and good-bye to all. No tears, no sobs, no flowers. Apologies to the good landlady.

JOHN V. HALLER.

Second Note to Police.

The other note was as follows:

To the Police:

If there is any money left after the funerals, give it to the land-

TOMBRIDGE GETS 10-YEAR TERM ON PLEA OF GUILTY

Head of South Side Realty Firm Admits Embezzlement of Two Deeds of Trust.

COMPANIES' CLIENTS LOST OVER $350,000

"All I Was Trying to Do Was Save the Business," He Declares—"Not a Cent to Show for It."

Raymond J. Tombridge, 45-year-old president of the Tombridge Agency and the Helena Realty Co., South Side real estate concerns which collapsed recently with a loss to clients of more than $350,000, pleaded guilty today to five charges of embezzlement and was sentenced to 10 years in the penitentiary.

Consecutive penitentiary sentences of five years each were imposed by Judge Hartmann for the conversion of a $3000 deed of trust from Mr. and Mrs. John Pimmer, 6205 Radom avenue, and the conversion of a $6000 deed from Miss Helen Pinckney, 3887 Fairview avenue, a trustee for the estate of her mother.

Concurrent five-year sentences were imposed on three other transactions, involving the conversion to his own use of deeds of trust belonging to clients.

Other Offenses Involved.

They involve a $200 payment on a deed of trust owned by Emil Klund, 5304 Quincy street; conversion of a $500 deed owned by Mrs. Minnie Weber, 3115 Keokuk street, and that of a $400 deed from Mrs Elizabeth P. Elmer, 3828 Minnesota avenue.

The real estate dealer, after con[illegible] Circuit Attorney McLaughlin, waived a preliminary hearing and went directly to the courtroom to receive his sentence.

Shabbily dressed, his heavy face showing marks of distress, Tombridge stood before the bench as complainants against him craned curiously forward from front-row seats in the courtroom. Upon hearing "five years" pronounced as the charges were being read, one woman exclaimed, "Is that all?"

After the sentences had been imposed and his attorney had made a statement in his behalf Tombridge was led from the room. As the door swung shut behind him, Mrs. Pimmer burst into tears and said:

"Now what are we going to do? He's taken all of our money."

Tombridge will go to the penitentiary Thursday with 39 other prisoners, sentenced for various offenses.

"End of the Trail."

Prior to appearing in court, Tombridge, who has been at liberty under bond of $5000, observed to a Post-Dispatch reporter that "this is the end of the trail."

"It's a hell of a reward," Tombridge continued, "for a lifetime of hard work without a cent to show for it. All I was trying to do was to save the business and protect my clients. When a bank fails everybody cheers if a 25 per cent payment to creditors is made. But when a real estate firm goes under, it's just too bad."

Tombridge, who started in as a schoolboy in a business founded 50 years ago by his father, the late Frank Tombridge, said he had turned over all his assets to his creditors and was ready to assume full responsibility for the conduct of his firm. He told his wife and their four children, two daughters and two sons, the eldest 19, farewell last night.

"I've always been an impatient man," he remarked ruefully, "but now I am going to a place where I will have plenty of time to learn patience."

$60,000 Debts in 1916.

His attorney, Rodowe H. Abeken, told the Court that the Tombridge Agency, which maintained an office at 3318 Meramec street in a two-story building, financed by a subsidiary, the Helena company, had debts of between $60,000 and $70,000 when its founder died in 1916.

"The father, an honorable, respected South Side citizen, called his son to him on his death bed," Abeken said, "and told him he wanted him to take charge of the business and operate it until all of its legitimate debts were paid. All of his transactions were strictly above-board and he was chiefly desirous to see that none of his clients lost a cent."

Taking over the business, the son was faced by another blow in 1923, Abeken continued, when an employe, according to the agency's

DOLLAR DEVALUATION PROBABLY NEXT MOVE

OTHER EXECUTIVE ORDERS READY

"This Is About the Nicest Birthday Present I Ever Had," Says Roosevelt; Intimation of Currency Talks With Britain.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—President Roosevelt late today signed the bill giving the Treasury title to the gold in the Federal Reserve Banks and bestowing upon him the power to devalue the dollar by from 40 to 50 per cent.

The President signed the bill at 3:54 p. m., in the presence of Secretary Morgenthau and members of the press.

Mr. Roosevelt later issued the orders necessary to take over the national gold supply.

It was indicated that a proclamation fixing the value of the dollar se[illegible] cents would not be issued before tomorrow.

Smiling and joshing with the newspaper men circled about his desk, the President remarked as he picked up his pen: "This is about the nicest birthday present I ever had."

Taking Only Gold.

Until the mechanically difficult task of taking over the more than three billion dollars of gold held by the Federal Reserve System is completed, Mr. Roosevelt is expected to reserve action on devaluing the dollar and establishing the stabilization fund.

But he will move immediately to put the new monetary system into effect. He has asked Secretary Morgenthau, Gov. Black of the Federal Reserve Board, George L. Harrison, governor of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, Professors George F. Warren and James Harvey Rogers, monetary experts, and Herman Oliphant, counsel to the Treasury, to meet with him immediately after the signing of the bill.

The first objective is getting the national gold supply into control of the Treasury. It will be kept in bullion form as a basis for currency issues.

Proclamation on Dollar.

When this operation has been arranged, the President will issue a proclamation fixing definitely the new value of the dollar in terms of gold. This v[illegible] will be between 50 and 60 per ce[illegible] of its previous gold content, in accordance with the new law which was requested by the President.

The Government then will have a profit in gold of more than two billion dollars, resulting from the depreciated price of the dollar. The President will use two billion dollars of this for a stabilization fund to use in steadying the dollar in foreign exchange and for other purposes.

The Treasury Secretary will have authority to buy and sell gold in foreign exchange and to buy Government bonds in the domestic market.

Morgenthau Has Orders Ready.

Secretary Morgenthau indicated he had executive orders ready for putting the gold act into effect.

Orders will be needed to swing the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund into operation. With the bill signed Treasury experts figure the United States holds title to $4,01[illegible]000,000 of gold. Money for the stabilization fund will be taken from the approximately $2,666,000,000 profit gained from devaluing the gold dollar.

Morgenthau said the amount of the Federal Reserve Bank gold now actually in the banks, approximated $800,000,000. Most of the Federal Reserve System's supply of $3,586,000,000 in gold now is in

AGRICULTURAL ADJUSTMENT ACT HELD ILLEGAL

Federal Court Grants Injunction Against Enforcing of Proration Orders in Citrus Industry.

By the Associated Press.

TAMPA, Fla., Jan. 30.—Federal Judge Alexander Akerman today declared the Agricultural Adjustment Act unconstitutional and issued to a group of Florida citrus growers an injunction restraining the state control committee from enforcing proration orders under the act.

In an oral order from the bench at the conclusion of a two-day hearing on injunction proceedings brought by the Hillsborough Packing Co. and Lake Fern Groves, Inc., Judge Akerman said the act, when considered in the light of the Constitution, "is so full of holes you could drive eight yoke of oxen through it."

He said, "I would be more than happy if I could avoid deciding the questions presented in this case, but if I did, I'd be a coward." He added that public clamor and threats could not deter him from ruling as he saw the matter.

Declaring that he read the Constitution once a week but could find no reference in it to the Department of Agriculture, the Judge said the Secretary of Agriculture had become such a great power that he had an army of men, greater than George Washington, and today had more power than Caesar or Napoleon. "And all without constitutional authority."

In issuing a temporary injunction to the shippers and growers against the State Control Committee, Judge Akerman dismissed the bill as it pertains to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace. The Government had moved for this action on the ground that Wallace was not a resident of the district and therefore not subject to the Court's jurisdiction.

Government attorneys indicated the case would be appealed.

"The act undoubtedly was passed at the request of the Department of Agriculture and approved by the Attorney-General," said the Court. "Congress used to pass its own bills, but not any more. If the act is constitutional, the departments at Washington should have come here and said so."

The Government's only answer to a five-hour attack on the validity of the act was a five-minute presentation of a motion to dismiss the suit against Wallace on the ground of "no jurisdiction."

LIQUOR CONTROL MEASURE GOES TO ILLINOIS GOVERNOR

Russian Balloon Reaches 12.79-Mile Record Height

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Jan. 30.—A Soviet civil aviation stratosphere balloon which took off on an unannounced ascension today was reported in a message from its crew to have reached the record height of 20,600 meters (67,585 feet, or 12.79 miles).

The balloon, known as the "Osoaviakhim," attained its maximum altitude at 11:59 a. m. (3:29 a. m., St. Louis time). A radio message said descent was started immediately. The crew reported the temperature outside the gondola was between 33 and 49 degrees below zero and 4 below inside.

The message "all is well" was flashed from the balloon, followed with additional word that visibility was so poor the crew could not determine their exact position. Airplanes were dispatched from the Moscow military airdrome to help the balloonists to find themselves.

The balloon was taken up in spite of bitter cold weather in an effort to beat the mark of 62,304 feet set in September by the Russian military balloon "Stratostat U. S. S. R." It was manned by Pavil Fedosenko, Andrey Vasenko and Ilya Usyskin.

The weather was foggy and the temperature was close to freezing when the balloon, about the same size as the military balloon, went aloft. The start was made at 8:40 a. m., in the presence of only a few military and civil aviation officials from the civil aviation airport, at the village of Mazilovo, eight miles from Moscow.

So rapid was the ascent that the balloon soon disappeared from sight.

No previous announcement had been made that the flight would take place. Apparently every effort was made to keep the ascension a secret.

Lieutenant-Commander T. G. W. Settle of the United States set the present recognized stratosphere flight record Nov. 20, when he and Maj. Chester L. Fordney reached a height of 61,237 feet. The record previously had been held by Prof. Auguste Piccard at 53,153 feet.

Three Soviet balloonists in the "Stratostat U. S. S. R." said they ascended more than 62,000 feet Sept. 30. The Soviet Union, however, is not represented in the International Federation Aeronautic, which approved the Settle mark, hence the Russians' flight could not be considered for the record.

SHIPPING MAN BROWN'S PARTNER IN SPECULATIONS

Witnesses Tell Senators of Relations Between Former Postmaster-General and Joseph H. Bagley.

FARLEY GRILLED ON TEXAS AIR TRIP

"It Won't Happen Again," He Says—Took Six Suits of Underwear Along, Given 10-Gallon Hat.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Walter F. Brown, Postmaster-General during the Hoover administration, had a secret joint stock speculating account from 1929 to 1931 with a man who was selling large quantities of building material to the Government and who was heavily interested i na ship company to whose subsidiaries Brown awarded valuable mail subsidies, the Senate Investigating Committee was told this afternoon.

The man was the late Joseph H. Bagley, and when he died in 1932 he bequeathed his entire estate to Brown. They had suffered heavy losses in the stock account, although at one time it had a balance of more than $500,000.

Bagley's estate had a value, at the peak of security values, of approximately $1,500,000, but as finally received by Brown was worth about $50,000. Brown described it at the time as "practically nothing."

Tells of Handling Account.

The testimony was given by officials of the brokerage house of G. M. P. Murphy & Co. and by L. B. Peters, who was Bagley's secretary up to the time of his death in 1932. Peters said he handled the account.

It was carried on the broker's books under the designation of "B-50," for the reason, one of them explained, that "Mr. Bagley didn't want the employes of the office to know who owned it."

It also was disclosed that a partner in the Murphy firm was interested in a large airline to which Brown accorded a mail contract.

The account was purely speculative, having been carried on the books at all time sas a marginal trading account. It was open with collateral supplied by Bagley. It resulted in heavy losses to Bagley and Brown.

The committee and the spectators had not fully recovered from the shock of these disclosures when Edward M. Martin, appointment clerk in the department under Brown, testified that he burned documents pertaining to departmental appointments before Brown went out of office.

He also revealed that he discussed the episode with Brown one night about a week ago in the office of Senator Simeon D. Fess (Rep.), Ohio, Martin formerly was Fess' secretary. Brown and Fess are political allies in Ohio.

Earlier in the hearings there was testimony that Brown and Assistant Postmaster-General W. Irving Glover ordered official documents burned in the furnace of the department building, and Chairman Black (Dem.), Alabama, on one occasion observed that Brown "should at least be credited with trying to save on the coal bill."

Of Political Nature.

Senator Austin, Vermont (Rep.), asked Martin whether it was not true that documents of the character which he had burned might have been used by the incoming Democratic administration to embarrass the Republican party and the witness said it was true. Black pounced on him like a chicken hawk.

"What was in those papers that would have damaged the Republican party?" he demanded. Then followed a scorching cross-examination in which the harried witness twisted and finally became almost completely mute. Black corkscrewed out of him tre statement that the correspondence was of a political character.

Farley Produces Missing Records of Ex-Postal Chief.

The missing postoffice records which Brown was "amazed" to find among his personal effects last week, nearly a year after he left office, were produced before the committee today by Postmaster-General James A. Farley. They relate to air mail and ocean mail contracts, through which the Government subsidizes air and ship lines.

But other papers ardently sought by the committee were still missing. Among them was a letter from the Mellon-controlled Gulf Refining Co. at Norfolk, Va., to Brown, urging the establishment of an air mail route between that city and Washington, and a letter from Brown to the then Secretary of the Treasury, Andrew W. Mellon, assuring him that the route would be opened as soon as the Department of Commerce could light it and establish emergency landing fields. The committee, however, had somewhere obtained copies.

The Republican Senator Austin of Vermont struck back at the administration by grilling Farley severely about an air junket taken by himself and other officials to Texas last summer on a plane owned by a company having an air mail contract. "Big Jim" was decidedly uncomfortable under the Vermonter's questions and at one time remarked:

"Just so there won't be any misunderstanding, I assure you it won't happen again."

The revelation that Farley went to Texas with six suits of underwear and came back with a 10-gallon hat caused considerable amusement among the spectators.

Questioned by Senator.

Senator Austin inquired whether Farley expected to leave in the files all correspondence received by him during his term of office. Farley replied that "I certainly shall be very careful to leave in the files all correspondence pertaining to official business."

Austin asked whether Farley had modified any of the airmail contracts that existed when he took office. Farley said he had not and agreed that this might be considered as tacit approval of them.

Austin questioned Farley at length and in detail about an airplane trip to Texas last summer. The Senator read from a memorandum, and asked the Postmaster-General whether members of the party were instructed that "they could not spend a dime in Texas," if they were told that "six changes of linen would be enough," if they were informed that "dinner coats would not be required," and that "they would have overnight pressing service?" To all these questions Farley answered that he had not seen the memorandum, and didn't know what it contained.

"Didn't Ask What They Cost."

Austin wanted to know whether Amon G. Carter, publisher of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, was one of Farley's hosts in Texas, and the Cabinet member replied that he was.

"And did the members of your party accept expensive gifts from him?"

"Every man who visits Amon Carter gets a hat," Farley replied. "In our case there wasn't much choice in the matter, because the hats we wore down there were taken away from us."

"And these were expensive beavers, costing perhaps $20 each?" To be frank with you, Senator, I didn't ask him what they cost."

Austin's questioning of Farley elicited the fact that Silliman Evans, Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General, was vice-president of American Airways, a company with a mail contract, before taking his present position. Farley hastened to state that Evans has nothing to do with airmal.

Answering Chairman Black, Farley said he had reduced payments to airmail contractors 34 per cent since he took office. He disclosed that 2409 miles of afrmail routes have been discontinued under the present administration. No extensions of either air or ocean mail rputes have been made by him, Farley said. Numerous extensions were made by Brown, some of them being considerably longer than the original routes.

J. J. Doran, a postoffice inspector, produced a copy of a report made to Brown on the celebrated "spoils conference," at which a few big airline operators sat down together and divided the airmail map among themselves. Doran said he found the copy in a filing cabinet in the Postoffice Department, but had been unable to locate the original.

Black disclosed that the copies of missing letters which he handed to Doran were found in the files of corporations having airmail contracts. Not only are the originals missing from the Postoffice Department, Doran said, but the copies are all gone, although it was the practice in the department to make three.

Doran told the committee that approximately 30 large drawers of correspondence, all relating to airmail contracts, are missing from the department's files. Inspectors have been searching for it for the last six weeks, he said.

Doran stated that 21 letters for which he has been asked to search have not been found.

After Austin had read two copies of letters which obviously related to personal affairs, Black started to read the others. All of those he read dealt with airmail contracts.

"Would you consider this official or personal correspondence?" he asked the inspector. "Official," said Doran.

"Of course, you wouldn't know how Mr. Brown would consider it?" "No, sir."

"Naturally, you didn't find any of the letters that were burned?" "Hardly."

"How do you know you didn't?" Austin snapped. Laughter almost drowned the inspector's answer.

"Senator, I couldn't very well have found anything that had been burned," he said. Austin considered a moment, and seemed to find the answer reasonable.

"Burning Was Unusual."

Twenty-two large filing cases had been trundled into the committee room, and James J. Maher, a department clerk, testified that, under the instructions of Kenneth McPherson, Brown's secretary, he burned all the contents the day before Brown went out of office.

"Was there anything unusual about destroying the personal correspondence of a Postmaster-General who was going out of office?" Austin asked. "No, sir, it was destroying the official correspondence that was unusual," was the bland reply.

Maher disclosed that he helped pack the box in which Brown last week made his "amazing" discovery. Sitting with his hands on the papers produced by Farley, Maher emphatically denied that he had placed them in the box, or that he saw them in it.

"Is it an old custom of Postmasters-General to burn official documents when leaving office?" "That was the first time I ever burned any," Maher replied.

RETALIATORY DEBT DEFAULT BILL BACKED BY PRESIDENT

Senate Plans to Repass Measure Barring Finanical Deals With Nations Behind in Payments.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Administration acquiescence in retaliatory legislation against foreign debt defaulters was conveyed to Senate Democratic leaders yesterday, although modifications to meet State Department approval were forecast before a bill is finally enacted.

Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the majority leader, said that with a few amendments acceptable to the Department, the Senate would pass the bill of Senator Johnson (Rep.), California, barring financial dealings with nations behind in whole or in part in their war debts to this country.

"The principle of the bill," Robinson said, "is to express the conviction of Congress that those governments which won't pay are not entitled to further credit in this country. The bill is to protect the public against the purchase of new issues of those governments that won't pay the United States what they owe it."

To Call Up Bill in Few Days.

Robinson is expected to call up the bill in a few days and to offer the amendments the administration will accept. These changes would confine the restrictions to nations that are behind in their debts to the American Government and not apply them to countries owing private citizens or corporations only.

They also would apply the bar on this side only to individuals and corporations, excluding Government corporations so as not to conflict with the provision in the administration's money bill authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to deal in foreign exchange in an effort to stabilize the dollar abroad.

Another proposed amendment would exempt renewals or adjustments of existing indebtedness. This is designed to permit American holders of foreign securities to continue to receive refunding bonds or scrip in lieu of interest.

Opinion Differs on "In Part."

There was a difference of opinion as to whether the bill, by applying to nations in default "in part," would prevent persons or corporations making loans to or buying and selling the securities of Great Britain and other nations which have made token payments on their war debts.

Some Senators took the position it would affect the token payers. Others said the administration in accepting token payments considered the nations making them as not in default.

The Johnson bill passed the Senate Jan. 11 but has been held up ever since by a motion to reconsider by Robinson, who was absent from the chamber when a handful of Senators on the floor put it through without a word of debate.

Treasury Statistics on Debts.

The Treasury Department reported to the Senate today that $304,155,582 is overdue to the United States under the World War debt funding agreements, but that $15,385,109 of the total resulted from the Hoover moratorium.

Responding to a resolution asking for a report, the Treasury said the debts to the United States from foreign governments totaled $12,710,451,610, of which $12,352,498,355 was covered by funding agreements.

Of the $304,155,582 unpaid, according to the funding agreements, the Treasury said $76,738,995 was principal, $212,031,477 was interest and $15,385,109 was unpaid under the moratorium agreement.

Altogether, counting the $357,953,254 for which no agreements had been negotiated, the department reported a total of $662,108,837 unpaid.

COLORADO'S CWA CHIEF AND AIDS FIRED BY HOPKINS

National Administrator Ousts Them Because Member of Commission Got Fee on Denver Job.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Harry L. Hopkins, Civil Works Administrator, has discharged the Colorado Civil Works Administrator, Herbert Fairall, and the entire Colorado Civil Works Commission.

He appointed Casper D. Shawver last night to be Civil Works Administrator in Colorado. Shawver will operate without an assisting commission.

The Colorado Civil Works leaders were discharged for approving a project for auditing the books of the city of Denver. One of the members of the commission, Ralph Mayo, Hopkins said, was employed by the city to supervise the project and was receiving a fee from the city.

Illinois Resignation Accepted.

The resignation of Robert J. Dunham, State administrator in the Civil Works Administration Commission in Illinois, was accepted by Hopkins.

Hopkins endeavored for three days to keep Dunham as head of the Civil Works Administration in Illinois, but Dunham insisted that his resignation be accepted.

Dunham and the Illinois Civil Works commission resigned as a result of the appointment of Lieutenant-Colonel Dan T. Sultan, an army engineer, as Civil Works administrator in Chicago.

In accepting the resignation, Hopkins announced that Howard Hunter, field representative of the Civil Works Administration, in whose territory Illinois is situated, had been appointed Acting Civil Works administrator for Illinois pending appointment of a permanent administrator.

Dunham continues as relief administrator and the commission which resigned will serve as the State relief commission.

Criticism by Contractor.

In the presence of Hopkins, Fred Cranford, New York subway contractor, called the Civil Works administration "about 2½ to 5 per cent efficient."

Cranford made the charge at a meeting of the Associated General contractors of America.

"You can't tell me about these things," Hopkins replied. "I'm running this show."

Asked whether contractors would be put in charge of Civil Works projects, Hopkins said "it could be done but I don't think it will."

WIFE OF LINDBERGH GETS GEOGRAPHIC SOCIETY MEDAL

First Woman to Receive Hubbard Award; Conferred for Her Work as Co-Pilot.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Mrs. Anne Morrow Lindbergh today was awarded the Hubbard gold medal by the National Geographic Society for her "brilliant accomplishments as radio operator, aerial navigator and co-pilot."

She is the first woman to receive the award. It has been conferred on nine men, including her husband, Charles A. Lindbergh, with whom she recently made an extensive air journey.

Mrs. Lindbergh's achievements during the comprehensive survey trip with Col. Lindbergh were unique in several respects," the society said. "She traveled more than 29,000 miles in 198 flying hours, not as a passenger but as a copilot. She had the sole responsibility throughout the trip for radio communications, and was commended by veteran wireless operators on both sides of the ocean who received her messages as a worthy member of their fraternity, whose signals always came in fast and clear.

"Between radio messages, Mrs. Lindbergh found time to share the navigational duties of her husband, and again received plaudits for her skill and accuracy. A competent pilot, she also handled the controls of the high-powered plane at times, to relieve Col. Lindbergh."

PROPOSES U. S. TRAIN 5000 YOUTHS EACH YEAR TO FLY

McSwain Offers House Measure to Set Up Junior Air Corps for National Defense.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30. — Five thousand American youths would learn to pilot airplanes every year, partially at the Government's expense, under a bill introduced yesterday by Chairman McSwain (Dem.), South Carolina, of the House Military Affairs Committee.

Any person between 18 and 21 years old with a high school education would be eligible for training. The Secretary of War would be authorized to detail officers for training the cadets and lend planes, equipment and fields to the reservists.

"Flying is the sport of youth, because it appeals to the spirit of adventure and of love for daring," McSwain said in a statement. "The purpose of my bill in setting up the junior air corps is to capitalize this love of youth in the interest of national defense."

The 300 reservists with the highest ratings would go into the regular army air reserve for a year's active service.

DOLLAR DEVALUATION BILL IS SIGNED BY THE PRESIDENT

the Treasury, Federal mints and assay offices.

Morgenthau intimated strongly that currency stabilization discussions with Great Britain were not far away. He shook his head negatively when asked if the talk had already started, smiled and added: "But if you ask me again next week I won't answer." By that time, he indicated, a condition might arise where "I would either have to lie to you" or tip off the Treasury's hand.

The new Treasury chief already has indicated he would use the stabilization fund as "blue chips" on the table so far as England and other nations are concerned. Avoiding a question as to the possibility of a currency war with Great Britain his answer was: "What's a fellow going to say when he's all armed?"

Morgenthau said a half dozen experts would be called on for advice as to the operations of the stabilization fund. However, they apparently are not to be given the satisfaction of knowing just whose advice is followed for, said Morgenthau, probably no one but the President and himself will have an exact knowledge of what is bein done.

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York is to act as the Treasury's agent in the administration of the fund, just as it has in past purchases of gold abroad, Morgenthau said, and the State Department will be called upon for reports bearing upon the situation from the nation's consular representatives abroad.

Aid for Employes Abroad.

Regardless of the effect of the monetary policy in the United States, Government officials abroad can testify that it has worked where they are concerned. In consequence, President Roosevelt has asked Congress for $7,125,000 to take care of the situation. Most of the money would be used for State Department officials overseas, many of whom have reported that the depreciated dollar has reduced their buying power until they are having trouble buying.

Hitler Reviews His Year in Power

circumstances, recognize the past dynastic interests as obligations of the German people which must be respected for all the future."

"Peace With All Nations."

The second half of the speech was devoted to foreign policy.

"As honest adherence to a real policy of reconciliation," he declared, "we believe we would contribute most to real peace by insisting upon the restitution of Germany's honor and equality.

"By fighting for equality, Germany desired also to contribute toward improving world economic relations.

"Germany desires peace with all nations, but have noted with pain that the difference between our political conception and that of other peoples led to heaping upon the German people many unjustified reproaches and to meeting them with distrust.

"We hold that it is each people's own business to determine its own domestic life."

Austrian Relations Unsatisfactory.

"To the German Government's great regret," said Hitler, "its relations with the present Austrian Government are not satisfactory.

"The fault is not ours. The assertion that Germany plans to violate Austria is absurd and incapable of proof.

"But it is only natural that an idea which has deeply stirred and permeated the German nation would not halt at the frontier posts of a country which for centuries was an integral part of the German Empire.

"No revolutionary ideas were ever stopped at the frontiers, as the French revolution has shown.

"If the present Austrian Government thinks it necessary to suppress this movement forcibly it is its own affair, but it will have to bear the consequences.

"Austria cannot expect German guests if the latter are looked upon as unwelcome—no more than Germany could expect American or British guests if they were to have their national emblems and flags torn down while they were visiting Germany.

"Germany cannot tolerate such humiliating treatment."

Then he exclaimed, triumphantly: "All Germans now traveling abroad, except emigrants, are National Socialists!"

Hitler continued: "The allegation of the Austrian Government that any attack by the Reich is being undertaken, or even planned, against Austria must be rejected most sharply."

"If Austria objects to political propaganda emanating from Germany," Hitler continued, "surely the German Government could rightly complain of propaganda emanating in other countries from German emigres living there."

Germany, he said, would not complain of propaganda in the Saar, in Prague and in Paris, because it felt strong enough to counteract any such propaganda.

Proudly proclaiming he was an Austrian by birth, Hitler said the Austrian people were nationally-minded enough not to need propaganda from Germany.

This was followed by a tribute to Premier Mussolini of Italy and to Italy.

Admonition to Stalin.

To Joseph Stalin, Soviet Russian dictator and head of the Communist party, Hitler addressed an admonition. He said:

"Just as little as in Russia would be tolerated a German National Socialist tendency, will Germany tolerate a Communistic tendency or even Communist propaganda."

In relation to Poland, Hitler said that when he became Chancellor there was danger that the differences between Poland and Germany might lead to a political and hereditary enmity.

"Poles and Germans must resign themselves to the realization of each other's existence," he said. "It is therefore more purposeful to so mold a condition of a thousand years' standing that both nations should derive the maximum benefit therefrom.

"The German Government was happy to find in Marshal Pilsudski the same broad-minded viewpoint."

Franco-German Relations.

Concerning Franco-German relations, Hitler declared no one in Germany wanted to threaten France's security. Germany is ready to do everything in her power to prove this statement, he said, "but Germany demands equality."

"Nobody in the world," Hitler said, "has the right to defy this to a great nation and nobody would have the power to prevent it permanently. A new war is wanted by nobody and would lead to international chaos.

"The question of the Saar Basin is the only territorial question still open between France and Germany. After its solution Germany is ready and determined to accept the Locarno Treaty (which binds signatories to arbitrate disputes) in all its aspects.

He suggested the Saar question be solved without a plebiscite which he intimated would leave a feeling of defeat with one or the other nation, depending upon which way the inhabitants voted.

Thanks British Government.

Hitler expressed thanks that the British Government had offered its services toward creating friendly relations between France and Germany. He said the British disarmament plan, submitted to Berlin yesterday, would be examined with the best will and friendly spirit.

He said Germany left Geneva and the disarmament conference only because Germany's honor and equality were not recognized but that Germany was ever ready to do her part toward bringing happiness to all peoples.

Hitler mentioned constitutional reform only briefly, stating that all steps along that line must have as their purpose the conservation and strengthening of nationalities.

"Our task," he said, "is this:

"The co-ordination of all forces in an organizational form which at last will recover what was neglected in half a century through selfishness and incompetency; and

"The advancement of the welfare of our people in all fields of human life and the advancement of culture based on high morality."

When Hitler left the Chancellery to go to the opera house his path down the famous boulevard, Unter den Linden, was a scene of intensive enthusiasm. Thousands of spectators formed a solid bank along the entire route, bursting into cheers as Hitler passed.

In the Tiergarten, many perched on trees and statues for a better view. The opera house was crowded to the doors long before Hitler appeared. The box reserved for foreign diplomats was crammed.

Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Premier of Prussia, opened the proceedings with an enthusiastic review of the last year. He described the year as a national regeneration rare in the history of the world. He paid tribute to Hitler as a savior. The Reich, he said, was now welded indivisibly for one aim—to shape Germany's destiny. That destiny, he said, no group of interests would be able to control.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30. — The House Agricultural Committee today approved a bill to make cattle a basic commodity under the Agricultural Adjustment Act and to authorize appropriations of $200,000,000 for benefits to the industry.

The committee's action followed extended hearings during which cattlemen generally favored the Jones bill, although persisting in their opposition to a processing tax, fear of which caused them last year to be successful in keeping cattle out of the list of basic commodities.

NEGRO LYNCHED, OFFICER BEATEN BY TAMPA MOB

Suspect in Attack on White Woman Is Dragged From Deputy Constable's Auto and Shot Dead.

MAN JUST TAKEN FROM THE CITY JAIL

Being Transferred to Charge of State Authorities When Crowd Gathers and Kills Him.

By the Associated Press.

TAMPA, Fla., Jan. 30.—A band of men early today lynched Robert Johnson, Negro, held for investigation for an alleged attack on a white woman.

Deputy Constable T. M. Graves reported he was kidnaped, beaten and then freed when the Negro, whom he was transferring from the city jail to the charge of State authorities, was shot down.

Johnson had been arrested Sunday night by city police. They said he was partly identified by the alleged victim, a woman employed in a cigar factory. Pending an investigation, the Negro was ordered placed in the county jail on warrants charging petty larceny in the theft of chickens and turkeys.

Graves got the prisoner this morning at 2:35 o'clock. He did not tell why he come for the prisoner at that hour, jail officials said. Graves said he was seized about 10 blocks from Police Headquarters. He said three automobiles blocked the path of his machine. He stopped, several men jumped on the running board of his car and pulled him out. He said he was beaten and then forced into the back seat of his car, where he lay, held down by the feet of two men. The Negro, meanwhile, was in the front seat with a third man.

They rode about two hours, Graves said, and stopped about 15 miles from Tampa in a wooded section on the Hillsborough River, where there were 10 or 15 cars parked. Graves quoted the Negro as admitting the attack and expressing regret.

The occupants of the cars disappeared into the woods. Graves said he heard five shots. Soon afterward the party returned, and Graves said he was driven farther into the country, where he was released and told to find his way home.

Graves accompanied a group of officers to the scene and they found the Negro's body with three bullet holes in the head and two in the body.

The lynching was the second in Hillsborough County in about 25 years.

Company Actuary on Stand.

Called as a witness by the Insurance Department, A. B. C. Mott, the company's actuary, testified that for the last two years he had recommended that the company reduce its policy dividends as much as one-third or one-half, but that the board of directors had not followed his recommendation. Some reduction in the net policy dividends was effected, he said, by curtailing the schedule of normal increases in such dividends.

Mott testified that net earnings last year available for policy dividends were not sufficient to cover the dividends paid.

J. M. Davis, manager of the company's accident and health department, testified that in 1933 the company lost accident insurance business on which annual premium income was $370,837. The greater part of the loss, he said, was in contracts for accident policies for newspaper subscribers. One large newspaper chain, he testified, canceled business on which the annual premiums were $270,000.

He told of the resignation last October of Jim G. Ferguson, vice-president of the company, who had built up the newspaper policy business, and said that most of the loss occurred after Ferguson became associated with another company.

Temporary Chairman of Board.

A. D. Nortoni, the company's general counsel, was elected temporary chairman of the board of directors at a meeting last night. Kermit Helm was elected temporary secretary. Louis Marks, secretary, who has been one of the principal witnesses for the Insurance Department, was dropped from the board of directors at the stockholders' meeting held Jan. 16.

Dr. C. R. Dudley was elected a director in the place of I. C. Smith, who resigned. Dr. Dudley was one of the four former directors who failed of re-election at the stockholders' meeting.

Pending termination of the litigation, the company is in the hands of E. B. Toler, as agent of the court.

Deputy Constable T. M. Graves reported he was kidnaped, beaten and then freed when the Negro, whom he was transferring from the city jail to the charge of State authorities, was shot down.

Johnson had been arrested Sunday night by city police. They said he was partly identified by the alleged victim, a woman employed in a cigar factory. Pending an investigation, the Negro was ordered placed in the county jail on warrants charging petty larceny in the theft of chickens and turkeys.

Graves got the prisoner this morning at 2:35 o'clock. He did not tell why he come for the prisoner at that hour, jail officials said. Graves said he was seized about 10 blocks from Police Headquarters. He said three automobiles blocked the path of his machine. He stopped, several men jumped on the running board of his car and pulled him out. He said he was beaten and then forced into the back seat of his car, where he lay, held down by the feet of two men. The Negro, meanwhile, was in the front seat with a third man.

They rode about two hours, Graves said, and stopped about 15 miles from Tampa in a wooded section on the Hillsborough River, where there were 10 or 15 cars parked. Graves quoted the Negro as admitting the attack and expressing regret.

The occupants of the cars disappeared into the woods. Graves said he heard five shots. Soon afterward the party returned, and Graves said he was driven farther into the country, where he was released and told to find his way home.

Graves accompanied a group of officers to the scene and they found the Negro's body with three bullet holes in the head and two in the body.

The lynching was the second in Hillsborough County in about 25 years.

Company Actuary on Stand.

Called as a witness by the Insurance Department, A. B. C. Mott, the company's actuary, testified that for the last two years he had recommended that the company reduce its policy dividends as much as one-third or one-half, but that the board of directors had not followed his recommendation. Some reduction in the net policy dividends was effected, he said, by curtailing the schedule of normal increases in such dividends.

Mott testified that net earnings last year available for policy dividends were not sufficient to cover the dividends paid.

J. M. Davis, manager of the company's accident and health department, testified that in 1933 the company lost accident insurance business on which annual premium income was $370,837. The greater part of the loss, he said, was in contracts for accident policies for newspaper subscribers. One large newspaper chain, he testified, canceled business on which the annual premiums were $270,000.

He told of the resignation last October of Jim G. Ferguson, vice-president of the company, who had built up the newspaper policy business, and said that most of the loss occurred after Ferguson became associated with another company.

Temporary Chairman of Board.

A. D. Nortoni, the company's general counsel, was elected temporary chairman of the board of directors at a meeting last night. Kermit Helm was elected temporary secretary. Louis Marks, secretary, who has been one of the principal witnesses for the Insurance Department, was dropped from the board of directors at the stockholders' meeting held Jan. 16.

Dr. C. R. Dudley was elected a director in the place of I. C. Smith, who resigned. Dr. Dudley was one of the four former directors who failed of re-election at the stockholders' meeting.

HEATING PAD IN BED CAUSES $2000 FIRE

Mrs. I. D. Kelley Awakened by Smoke at Portland Place Home.

Awakened by smoke and the odor of burning rubber at 3:30 a. m. today, Mrs. I. D. Kelley Jr. found that an electric heating pad, which she had placed in her bed before retiring, had caught fire. Before firemen had extinguished the blaze that followed, the house, at 9 Portland place, had been damaged about $2000.

With the temperature near zero, Mrs. Kelley had turned on the pad before retiring. She called her husband, a physician, who located the source of the smoke and attempted to put out the fire by pouring water on it from a metal waste paper container taken from the bathroom.

As he did an eider-down quilt on the bed flared into fire and within a few seconds the whole bed was in flames. As they ran from the room Dr. Kelley shut the door, cutting off the draft from the hall and confining the flames to the single room.

While Mrs. Kelley aroused three children and four servants, who were asleep in the house, Dr. Kelley telephoned a fire alarm. The family, dressing quickly but in warm clothing, was leaving the house when firemen arrived.

At that time the entire bedroom was in flames and a second alarm was sounded. Within a half-hour the fire had been extinguished and the Kelley family returned to the house, which is owned by Birch Mahaffey, Mrs. Kelley's brother-in-law.

STATE AUTO LICENSES GO ON SALE THURSDAY

Reduction in Fees of from 2 to 33 Per Cent in Effect; Plates Made at Prison.

State automobile license plates for 1934 will go on sale Thursday at the St. Louis office at 1701 Chestnut street and at county offices at 7814 Forsythe boulevard, Clayton, and 151 West Argonne drive, Kirkwood. The offices will be open from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

A new license law passed by the last Legislature reduced fees from 2 to 33 per cent and provided that licenses expire Dec. 31 instead of Jan. 31 as formerly. Consequently, the cost this year will be eleven-twelfths of the new rates.

The reductions made by the new rates are: Less than 12 horsepower, from $7.50 to $5; 12 to 24 horsepower, $10.50 to $8.50; 24 to 36 horsepower, $16.50 to $11; 36 to 48 horsepower, $22.50 to $20; 48 to 60 horsepower, $25.50 to $25.

The new plates were manufactured at the State penitentiary for the first time. The background will be black and the figures white.

GIRL 'HITCHHIKER' AIDS IN CONVICT'S CAPTURE

Drives Away in His Auto — He Is Caught as He Chases Her.

By the Associated Press.

AMARILLO, Tex., Jan. 30.—A girl "hitchhiker" caused the capture today of W. H. Bybee, life-termer from Abilene and El Paso, who escaped from the Eastman State prison farm two weeks ago when Clyde Barrow, Texas outlaw, freed a group of convicts.

Bybee was arrested on a highway while pursuing Evalyn B. Clark, 22 years old, of Los Angeles, who had driven away with his automobile when he stopped at a filling station west of here.

The car, containing a submachine gun, a rifle and other weapons, was turned over to Amarillo police.

Bybee had caught a truck and was following the girl when he ran into a police cordon. He was armed with a revolver but surrendered without resistance.

Miss Clark said she was returning to Los Angeles from Kansas City when she "thumbed" a ride out of Vinita, Ok., yesterday. After she saw the firearms in the car Bybee told her he was an escaped convict and bank robber, who "didn't want to be taken."

"He pleaded with me to be a 'pal' to him and drive while he got some sleep," she said. Her first opportunity to escape came today, she said, when Bybee entered the filling station and left the keys in the car.

"I was scared to death, but stepped on the gas and darted away," she told police.

ORVILLE JENNINGS LISTS PROPERTY IN COURT REPORT

Former Labor Leader Files Schedule in Connection With Market's Plea Under Bankruptcy Act.

Orville E. Jennings of Kirkwood, former vice-president of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, and center of bitter controversies in union labor and in the building business, has filed in Federal Court a schedule of his personal assets, showing a total of $267,745, and his personal liabilities, $79,365, or a balance of $188,280 in his favor.

The schedule was filed in accordance with the law, which requires such statements from members of a partnership seeking relief under the bankruptcy act. Jennings and Peter F. Anton are partners in Anton's Market, 5400 South Kingshighway, and as such are seeking an extension of time in which to pay debts of the business, or an opportunity to effect a composition with creditors. A schedule filed by the two shows the liabilities of the market to be $3886, of which $1945 is unsecured, and assets of $1916.

Jennings' personal schedule shows him, jointly with his wife, Pearl L. Jennings, as owner of real estate with a total value of $200,200, on which there are incumbering obligations of $69,400.

Eleven Farms Reported.

Ten farms in Webster County, Missouri, are listed, one of these being his Casa Loma Farm, from which he has sent prize-winning horses to St. Louis horse shows. Six of the Webster County farms, with a total acreage of 544 acres, and a scheduled value of $27,700, are unincumbered, and four, 1126 acres valued at $79,000, have incumbrances of $46,400. An eleventh farm, Taney County, Mo., near Branson, has 94 acres and is listed at $20,000, unincumbered.

The rest of the Jennings realty holdings are a lot at the southeast corner of Ninth street and Chouteau avenue, valued at $7500; a vacant lot and a two-story building at Kingshighway and Eichelberger avenue, $21,000, and his home at 725 East Monroe avenue, Kirkwood, $45,000. These three holdings are covered jointly by a deed of trust for $23,000.

Jennings' other scheduled personal assets are: Bank deposits, $500; cash, $25; "horses and cows," $23,740; farm implements, $1500; insurance policies, $40,000; promissory notes, $1300, and wearing apparel, $30. The livestock item includes 30 sheep, 665 head of cattle, of which 65 are Jerseys and five mules. The implements include a tractor and a motor plow, and a Chevrolet coupe valued at $350.

Personal liabilities listed by Jennings are: Secured claims, $73,784, of which $69,400 is the real estate incumbrances previously named; unsecured claims, $1081; taxes due, $1000, and accommodation paper, $3500.

Walter D. Coles, retired Referee in Bankruptcy, has ordered Jennings and his partner, Anton, to file amended schedules of both their partnership and personal assets, to indicate more clearly the property of each individual which is subject to claims for the partnership debts. Jennings has claimed exemption for all unincumbered realty held as joint property of him and Mrs. Jennings. When the amended schedules are filed, a creditors' meeting will probably be called.

Jennings has been an active figure in labor controversies for the last 15 years. In 1917, in connection with a street car strike in Springfield, Mo., he was convicted of violating a Federal Court injunction, and was sent to jail. In 1919, he organized St. Louis telephone operators and conducted their strike.

His principal work in St. Louis was with the Electrical Workers' Union. He took over direction of Local No. 1 of this union in 1929. Testifying later in a court proceeding, Jennings said he took the management of the union "out of the hands of gangsters and extortionists, and made a labor union out of it." He said it would endanger his life to call names, in that connection.

Jennings resigned, last May, the position of assistant to the president of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. Last month he sued a contracting firm for an accounting of profits in a contract for construction of the Municipal Auditorium.

GERMANS HAPPY AGAIN ON SOUTH SEA ISLAND

Woman Who Went to "Paradise" With Man Changes Mind About Leaving.

ABOARD EXPLORATION CRUISER VELERO III, CHARLES ISLAND, Galapagos, Jan. 30.—Although she had expressed dissatisfaction in letters to her mother in Berlin, Frau Dore Strauch Koerwein said yesterday she never would leave this little volcanic isle on the equator, 600 miles off the Pacific Coast of Ecuador.

She told this to Capt. G. Allan Hancock of Los Angeles, who was visiting her with a distinguished party of Canadian and American Marine biological researchers.

"I was ill, and enraged over the Baroness, but now I am reconciled and never will I leave here," Frau Koerwein said.

It was four years ago that Frau Koerwein left Berlin with Dr. Friederick Ritter, dentist and vegetarian, and came to this old convict island in the Pacific for a new life.

Frau Koerwein left her husband, a Berlin merchant, and Dr. Ritter left his wife. The journey here was the consummation of a plan of 25 years for Dr. Ritter, who long had dreamed of creating and living in a "paradise" of his own.

It was a hard struggle in the first two years, but both reported they had attained happiness.

A year ago, the Baroness mentioned by Frau Koerwein came to the island. This was Baroness Ousequet de Wagner of Vienna, who had three man companions, and proclaimed herself "Empress."

Sensational stories went from the island about the asserted arrogance of the self-styled empress. She was a good two and a half hours' climb over volcanic rocks from the home of the Ritters, but the conditions, Frau Koerwein had said, made her sad. It was then that she wrote to her mother in Berlin, and the tenor of her letters caused her mother to believe she was ready to return.

POLICE REMOVE DILLINGER FROM ARIZONA BY PLANE

Three Other Members of Gang Also Being Returned to Indiana, but in Private Railroad Car.

By the Associated Press.

TUCSON, Ariz., Jan. 30. — John Dillinger, outlaw, fighting and protesting, was carried out of Arizona in a swift airplane maneuver last night ahead of a habeas corpus writ that would have delayed his departure at least another day.

The three other members of the Dillinger gang, who were arrested here, Harry Pierpont, Charles Makley and Russell Clark, were placed aboard a private car attached to a train leaving here at 10:55 a. m. today for Indiana. Mary Kinder, wanted for aiding in a prison delivery, was also in the car.

Pierpont, Makley, Russell and Miss Kinder were taken to the depot heavily shackled and escorted by 30 officers, armed with submachine guns.

Matt Leach of the Indiana State police was granted custody of the prisoners shortly after Judge Fred W. Fickett in Superior Court ordered Sheriff John Belton of Pima County to acknowledge warrants signed by Gov. B. B. Moeur granting their removal. John L. Van Buskirk, their attorney, who had hoped to forestall their extradition by habeas corpus proceedings, said there was nothing further he could do in the face of the warrants.

Dillinger was removed after State police received reports here that a force of gangsters was believed hurrying to Tucson to attempt a jail delivery. Shackled and under guard of four heavily armed Indiana officers, Dillinger was whisked in a chartered plane to Douglas, Ariz.

Forced to Change Clothes.

There, after he was forced to change his clothes so that he would be less easily recognized, he was placed in an eastbound American Airways plane which skimmed away at 11:14 p. m.

When Dillinger emerged on a stop at El Paso he was bareheaded and wearing an officer's overcoat, and his shirt was torn down the front.

Dillinger said he had been "railroaded." He said he wanted to return to Wisconsin to face robbery charges there because, "there is no capital punishment in Wisconsin."

Also accompanying the desperado was Nicholas Makar, Police Chief of East Chicago, where Dillinger is charged with killing an officer during a bank holdup. Five passengers rode from Douglas to El Paso on the same plane. Two other Indiana officers, R. G. Estill, Lake County prosecutor, and Hobard Wilgus, were on the plane.

The extradition request for Pierpont, Clark and Makley, charged them with bank robbery since they escaped with seven other convicts from the Indiana State prison at Michigan City last Sept. 26. Officers said, however, they will be turned over to Ohio authorities for prosecution in that State on a charge of murdering Sheriff Jess Sarber in a raid on the jail at Lima to release Dillinger. Extradition of Mary Kinder, one of three women taken as the gang fell into police nets here last week, was on a request that she be returned to stand trial for aiding the escaped Michigan City convicts.

Gangster Fights Officers.

Dillinger fought against removal from the Tucson jail. Even after a struggle against the handcuffs, the shrieking and cursing gang leader was not subdued. He attempted to prevent his removal by bracing his feet against the bars of his cell. Still shouting demands that he be allowed to see his attorney, he was dragged to a waiting automobile and hurried to the airport.

Pierpont, known as the "trigger man" of the gang, and Mrs. Kinder, who at first represented herself as his wife, had a marriage license which had not been used. She is the divorced wife of Dave Kinder, convict in the Michigan City prison. They refused to discuss how, why or when they planned to marry.

FEDERAL FUNDS TO AID IN REPAIR OF HOMES

Roosevelt Is Back of Legislation to Permit Loans for Modernization.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Already engaged in efforts to lift the mortgage, the Roosevelt administration intends to help the hard-pressed home owner modernize the family mansion and keep it in repair.

The legislative plans to that end were outlined yesterday by John H. Fahey, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, who said that aid for new building was also contemplated.

Fahey said that the program, whose purpose has the support of the President, would be included probably in the measure to guarantee the entire principal of the home loan bonds.

Fahey's plans aims at increasing the amount of money which building and loan associations may borrow from the bank system, and providing the direct loan of funds for modernization to home owners whose mortgages have been taken over by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

Fahey stressed that care would be taken to make sound loans, and caution would be used to prevent artificial stimulating of home building by the too free use of Government funds. Modernization, he said, was the principal object of the proposals.

The funds for home building and modernization are to be obtained partly from the Treasury and partly from the R. F. C. No legislative appropriation would be necessary. In financing the proposal, extreme care will be taken to avoid disturbing the market.

Fahey said statistics show about 400,000 new homes are built in a normal year. Last year only 50,000 new homes were built. At the same time modernization work is down to 20 per cent of normal. The number who might wish to buy new homes is a subject of dispute, but the lumber industry recently estimated that a market for 300,000 could be found.

SKINNER BROS. CO. CREDITORS TO GET 2 PER CENT PAYMENT

Court Also Approves Like Settlement With Henry Baetz for Interest in Royalties.

A 2 per cent payment to a group of creditors with claims totaling $281,545 against the Skinner Bros. Manufacturing Co., Inc., 1474 South Vandeventer avenue, was approved by Circuit Judge Ryan yesterday. The Court also directed a like payment on the claim of $125,700 held by Henry Baetz, 5854 Etzel avenue, a former employe of the firm. His claim was based on an interest in royalties accruing from the manufacture of an air heater.

The company, which manufactured heating and ventilating equipment, has been in receivership since Sept. 25, 1931, with Walter Siegerist, former general manager, and James M. Rohan acting as receivers.

In the order for the payment the Court excluded from participation the Lafayette-South Side Bank & Trust Co., on its claims amounting to $168,707. Baetz had objected to the bank's claim on the ground it represented a transaction between the Skinner Bros. corporation and its officers.

The payment order was on a motion filed by Baetz. He said the receivers had obtained possession of assets totaling $37,500, of which amount $15,000 had been paid to the receivers and their attorneys as fees and $7500 had been lost as quick assets by the closing and reorganization of the Lafayette-South Side Bank & Trust Co.

MRS. HENRIETTA BISCHOFF'S ESTATE VALUED AT $161,725

Inventory Filed Gives Principal Item as $94,000 in Government Bonds.

The estate of Mrs. Henrietta Bischoff, widow of Henry Bischoff, one of the founders of the St. Louis Independent Packing Co., was valued at $161,725 in an inventory filed in Probate Court yesterday.

The principal item was Government bonds listed at $94,000. The inventory did not assign a value to her home at 4549 Forest park avenue, which she had valued in her will at $8000.

Her will divided the estate into seven parts, leaving one part each to a daughter, Mrs. Henrietta Haverstick, and three sons, Henry, Louis, Frank. One part was left to two daughters of a deceased son, William; one part to three daughters of a deceased daughter, Mrs. Ida Kollmeier; one part to three sons of a deceased son, Gustav. The home was left to Mrs. Haverstick, its assigned value of $8000 to be deducted from her interest in the estate.

The scholarship, to be awarded each June, will pay the recipient's tuition for a four-year course at any university she chooses. It will be given to the girl who "has shown the most marked improvement in her high school course" and will be awarded by a committee of teachers.

RANDOLPH LAUGHLIN'S WIDOW SUES THE THOMASSON ESTATE

She Files $33,977 Claim for Legal Services and Cash Advanced.

A $33,977 claim for legal services and cash advanced was filed in Probate Court today by Mrs. Marie H. Laughlin, widow of Randolph Laughlin, attorney, against the estate of Hugh W. Thomasson, wealthy real estate owner. Laughlin was counsel for Thomasson between April, 1932, and January, 1933, when the real estate owner died.

Mrs. Laughlin sets forth that her husband lent Thomasson $11,503 during his lifetime and paid $124 on the funeral expenses. In the $22,350 claimed for legal services, the principal item is $13,500 for representing Thomasson at the 90-day hearing in 1932, which resulted in a jury verdict in Circuit Court holding that Thomasson was a resident of St. Louis and not sane enough to change his residence. Other items are for office work and night work at $100 a day, as compared to $150 for each court day.

The suit names the Boatmen's National Bank, administrator under Thomasson's will, which left the bulk of his $600,000 estate to the public schools of Missouri. A group of collateral heirs are contesting the will.

HOBBIES FOR BOYS
BY ROBERT H. B. THOMPSON

Headmaster, St. Louis Country Day School

HOBBIES FOR BOYS is my hobby as a schoolmaster. The last five years have seen many fine minds "cracking up" because they could find no surcease from cares. Others are being saved by resort to hobbies. Such days of stress will return for the next generation. In childhood is the time to start a hobby, and teachers can lend their aid by fostering special interests and capabilities. Education should be more than a group of courses. It should look ahead to maturity and old age.

"Getting and spending we lay waste our powers—" and society demands it; but deeper satisfactions come in other ways. A man builds a model boat or climbs a mountain for the sheer joy of accomplishment. Hobbies are a welcome antidote for the competition which is ever-present in business, professions, games. In school they may spell success to some youngster who otherwise fails to achieve distinction.

As for me, a limpid stream has added charm if there is a fish in it (that bites), and for exercise, give me tennis.

8 IN JURY BOX FOR POISONED HIGHBALL TRIAL

Selection of Veniremen Proceeding Slowly in Case Against Mississippi Woman Doctor.

(Copyright, 1934.)

GREENWOOD, Miss., Jan. 30.—Dr. Sarah Ruth Dean, children's specialist, who is on trial in Circuit Court here for the murder of her long-time friend, Dr. John Preston Kennedy, passed through the first day of what promises to be a long and arduous case without losing any of the confidence which has sustained her throughout the five months that have elapsed since she is alleged to have given Dr. Kendendy a whisky and soda containing poison.

When she left the courtroom late yesterday afternoon her step was as firm and her carriage as erect as when she entered it. For hours she had sat calm and, outwardly at least, unmoved while the Judge and lawyers went about the tedious business of choosing the 12 men who will have the power to set her free or send her to the gallows.

Slow Progress on Jury.

The selection of a jury is proceeding slowly, although some progress was made during the afternoon session. A special venire of 200 men had been ordered, but of these the court officers had been able to serve only 166, and not more than 150 were on hand when Judge S. F. Davis opened the trial. Fifty-six veniremen were examined, and the great majority excused.

The State immediately accepted an entire panel, but the attorneys for the defense promptly began to weed out prospective jurors whom they considered undesirable. When court adjourned eight men remained in the jury box.

Dr. Dean arrived in court accompanied by her chief counsel, A. F. Gardner and Richard Denman; her aunt, Mrs. J. R. Boyles, with whom she has lived since, as a child, her father and mother died, and a friend of many years, Miss A. C. Taylor, a nurse in the Dover (Del.) hospital, where the young specialist served her internship. Dr. Dean wore her dark brown hair combed smoothly over her head and drawn into a knot under a small brown straw hat; a light brown coat over a dark brown dress, shoes and stockings to match, and black gloves.

Smoking Permitted in Court.

Judge Davis conducts court with considerable informality, but without in any way lessening his own dignity or that of his position. He wears no robes, and permits smoking in the courtroom at all times. Jurors, lawyers, defendants and spectators may puff cigars, cigarettes or pipes at their pleasure. The Judge himself sometimes smokes a short, black briar while court is in session. He explained to the newspaper correspondents that he regarded smoking in the courtroom as an aid to clear thinking.

"When a man is accustomed to tobacco," he said, "and he is deprived of it for hours at a time, he becomes jittery and anxious to get out. He cannot properly put his mind to the case and the evidence."

"Would the fact the defendant is a woman prevent your returning a verdict to send her to the gallows?" District Attorney Jordan asked each of the first 12 men declared by the Court to be qualified for jury service. Each man said it would not.

Jordan has indicated he will not ask specifically for the death penalty, but will leave the punishment, in event of conviction, up to the jury. He also gave indication that the State would challenge any defense move to discredit Dr. Kennedy's private reputation or his personal affairs.

"Should it be shown," Jordan said to the prospective jurors, "that Dr. Kennedy was guilty of some impropriety, would that prevent your returning a verdict if it is shown that any impropriety he may have committed did not justify the fate he received?" Again the group said it would not.

SAYS THREE MEN IN AUTO PUSHED TAXI INTO RIVER

Man Gets License Number of Their Car; Truck Driver Tells of Seeing Cab Disappear.

Police are investigating a report that a Yellow Taxicab, brought to St. Louis by Jess Ott of Kansas City, was pushed into the Mississippi River between Lucas avenue and Delmar boulevard yesterday afternoon.

Clarence Hoegemeier, driver of a truck for the Columbia Terminals Co., said he was going over Eads Bridge when he saw the cab roll into the river and disappear. Police found tire marks on the levee but no trace of the cab.

Ott told officers he parked the car in front of 415 Washington avenue to go into a nearby restaurant and that when he came out the cab was gone. According to George McKibbin, 5623A St. Louis avenue, the cab was pushed from its parking place by an automobile in which three men were riding. The license number of the private automobile, which McKibbin gave police, was traced, but officers found no one at the address to which the license was issued.

NEW LEGISLATION SOUGHT FOR FIGHT ON BOOTLEGGERS

House Judiciary Committee to Hear Suggestions of Officials on Ways to Stop Illicit Liquor.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The administration has decided to work for immediate legislation to fight bootlegging, which, according to Federal agents, is flourishing despite the repeal of prohibition.

The House Judiciary Committee has arranged to hear officials of the justice department, the Federal Alcohol Control Administration and the Internal Revenue Bureau at a secret meeting to plan the legislation.

These agencies, now at odds as to the most strategic procedure against the bootleggers, are known to be in agreement on an urgent need for some form of immediate legislative action. In all, three measures have been suggested. An effort will be made to weld them into one.

Letter From Official.

One of the officials to appear before the Judiciary Committee is Assistant Attorney-General John S. Hurley. The committee has before it a letter from him calling for legislation to permit seizure and immediate destruction of stills and the confiscation of automobiles, boats and airplanes taking illegal liquor into outlets for the tax-paid product. He asked for more machinery also to protect dry states under the twenty-first constitutional amendment.

He said bootleggers with large plants were making products and putting them out under labels with counterfeit stamp tax seals and that these products were finding their way into State stores and county dispensaries.

"I do not think I need to point out to you that the Webb-Kenyon Act is an antiquated piece of legislation; that it was passed at a time when the locomotive was the chief means of transporting liquor from a wet state to a dry state and that automobiles have since revolutionized the problem of protecting the dry states," the Assistant Attorney-General wrote.

"The Webb-Kenyon Act contains no penalty for forfeiture provisions. The Reed (bone dry) amendment in no ways modernizes the legislation.

"I am not at all sure but that it may be necessary, in order to make the twenty-first amendment enforceable, for Congress to make it a prima facie violation of such legislation enacted under the twenty-first amendment to possess, transport, sell or deliver in dry states tax-paid liquors bearing the label of the distillery located in a wet state.

"I did not include this proposal in my original recommendation for legislation, inasmuch as I doubt if it would be in any way popular legislation even in dry states.

"The country is at the present time flooded with imitations of various domestic blended and rectified spirits, all of which are non-tax paid. A similar situation, even more serious, exists with reference to the sale of bootleg liquors under imitation and spurious foreign labels. The bootlegger, in some instances, has gone to the extent of imitating the bottled-in-bond domestic product, by the use of counterfeit revenue scrip stamps.

"It is practically impossible under the present law to determine whether a given package of either domestic or foreign spirits is tax-paid unless the package contains five gallons or more, in which instance it would have to bear a revenue stamp.

"The five-gallon provision in the present law permits the bootlegger to imitate all brands of domestic, blended and rectified spirits, as well as all foreign liquors.

"The Canadian Government requires an excise stamp. This stamp can be easily imitated and inasmuch as it is no violation of our laws to counterfeit such stamp, the bootleg element has no hesitancy in utilizing same and imitating the Canadian product.

"These non-tax-paid imitations are so clever that the American distiller, in many instances, cannot recognize an imitation bootleg product put out under his label, without having an analysis of the contents of the package made.

"The distillers, both domestic and foreign, are continually complaining to the field bfficers of this unit that their product is being imitated and distributed by bootleggers. This imitation product is even finding its way into state stores and county dispensaries, particularly the imitation of foreign liquors.

Samples of Labels.

"I am attaching samples of labels, wrappers and caps, all of which are imitations, as well as counterfeit Canadian and domestic scrip stamps.

"To give you some idea of how easy it is to imitate the genuine domestic or foreign product, I am attaching a picture showing bootleg imitations of both American and foreign liquors."

Besides the pictures accompanying the letter, some of the samples of labels included those of Bacardi rum, Burnett's White Satin gin, John Dewar & Son's White Label Scotch whisky, Old Overholt whisky, Lincoln Inn, Silver Dollar, Four Aces, Mount Vernon and Monogram rye, and some of the scrip stamps bore the names of well-known licensed distilling companies.

6000 Birthday Parties Tonight to Honor President

Roosevelt to Entertain Little Group of Men and Women Who Have Supported Him Since 1920.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30. — Six thousand public parties will be held tonight, all over the country, in honor of the fifty-second birthday of the President of the United States and to raise money—probably $2,000,000—for the infantile paralysis curative sanitarium at Warm Springs, Ga., which is so near to his heart. To Franklin D. Roosevelt will come by air and wire warm and gracious echoes of this colossal series of celebrations for the birthday of a President.

Telegrams, letters and gifts will come to him. But of all the celebrations the one which will touch him most deeply and intimately will be the dinner party tonight, in his own private quarters in the White House, for "the Roosevelt boys and girls."

These men and women have followed the fortunes of Mr. Roosevelt since the days he ran for Vice-President in 1920. These dozen or 15 have spent half a generation in loyalty to the chief.

Beginning of Friendship.

They are in the White House today because of that faith, affection and loyalty—Col. Louis McHenry Howe, Marvin McIntyre, Steve Early, Margaret Lehand—others of the faithful crew. This intimate association began back in 1920, when Woodrow Wilson lay helpless in the White House and Cox of Ohio and Roosevelt of New York took the road to make the fight of democracy.

Howe came into the picture away back beyond 1920. For F. D. R. was his personal discovery as far back as 1911, when young Roosevelt, independent Democratic State Senator from Dutchess, was balking the ambition of Leader Murphy of Tammany to place in the United States Senate Billy Sheehan. It was in that bitter fight over the senatorship that Louis Howe, then a correspondent for a New York newspaper, Bennett's old Herald, sensed the comer in the long, lank, earnest youth from Dutchess County. It was then that Louis Howe hitched his wagon to the Roosevelt star and began to call him "Franklin"—about the only person that does so today outside of the Roosevelt family.

So Louis Howe is the dean of the Roosevelt boys and girls. The others came later—Miss Margaret Le Hand, the President's personal secretary, his right hand in those details through which he must go daily.

Steve Early, grandson of the old Confederate cavalry leader, Jubal Early, is the publicity contact man for the President. Marvin McIntyre is the appointment man.

Then there is Charley McCarthy, who stood by in the New York headquarters, and Tom Lynch, who used to be Tax Commissioner in New York State, and who was secretary to Louis Howe, and Stanley Prenosil, who did secretarial work on the campaign train, and James Sullivan, also on the train and working with Mrs. Roosevelt most of the time, and one or two more.

First Dinner in 1921.

Mr. Roosevelt lost in 1920, in the great Republican tidal wave, but after that campaign they had their first get-together dinner — on the President's birthday, Jan. 30, 1921. The birthday dinner was held at the Roosevelt country home at Hyde Park, New York, and to every one present he gave, as a souvenir, a pair of gold cuff links. On one link was the inscription, "F. D. R., 1920." On the other link the initials of the recipient. It was at that dinner that F. D. R. himself got up and made the little speech which has been the keynote of the Roosevelt boys and girls ever since:

"We are more or less linked together. I don't want that link broken." . . .

It never was. Misfortune fell upon the leader, the chief. Infantile paralysis struck him down.

Some of the boys and girls scattered to other employment for the time being—but the link still held, and always each year they got together to renew the bond, talk over old times and predict new triumphs. The original group has been reinforced by a few who came in late years to be associated with the President—Miss Nancy Cook, who is now with Mrs. Roosevelt; Kirke Simpson, Grace Tully, Malvina Schneider, now secretary to the first lady.

This year, at the dinner tonight, they will take in the President's daughter, Mrs. Anna Dall, and there will be gay, high jinks on the second floor of the White House.

The President never was in better fettle for his annual birthday party.

He takes a daily swim in the fine pool which was installed some six months ago in the basement of the White House. Every evening at six he is in bathing duds and splashing the waters.

Mail and express trucks and telegraph wires brought greetings to the President today that overtaxed the workers at the White House. Telegraph greetings were estimated at 150,000. Birthday cards for the day were calculated to total another 100,000. Bundles carrying all manner of gifts were stacked high in the Executive office. Birthday cakes were on about every desk.

The President arranged to send a word of personal thanks over the air tonight at 10:20 p. m., St. Louis time.

Early announced: "The President will speak as the representative of and in behalf of the crippled children of the nation, particularly those stricken with infantile paralysis who will be the beneficiaries of the fund being raised."

A TRUE STORY
By A MOTHER
who takes care of her home, and works four nights a week, too

YOU'VE got to hand it to the American woman! What she has done to keep her family together through this depression will perhaps never be properly appreciated.

Here's a letter from Mrs. Edmund F. Jones, 2721 West Meinecke Avenue, Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Let her tell her own story.

"These days I certainly have to be mighty careful of my health, because besides doing all my own washing, ironing, cooking, and cleaning for a family of four, including two children, I help earn the family living, too, so I am employed four nights a week.

"I have been using Nujol for nearly ten years, and I still find it to be the one and only remedy for family use. In fact it makes other remedies unnecessary, because its use seems to banish common ailments. When you take Nujol regularly you never seem to have that tired, run-down feeling! Is it because it gets rid of all the sluggish body poisons?

"This picture I am sending you is of Patricia, who is five, and Bobby, who is two, but it doesn't really do them justice. I wish you could see their sparkling eyes, healthy, clear color, and see how full of pep they are. Both children take Nujol regularly. Patsy Ann has thrived on it more than four years, and Bobby ever since he was six months old.

"Once before I wrote you a letter about Nujol which you published, and people wrote me about it from California, Kansas, Canada, and all over the country. They wanted to be sure what I said was true; they wanted to be convinced by me before they tried Nujol. Well, I guess they are all on Nujol now!"

Nothing we could add to Mrs. Jones' letter would make it any more convincing. Follow her example. See what Nujol will do for you—bring your children up on it and make them regular as clockwork. Get it at any drug store, now in two forms, plain Nujol and Cream of Nujol, the latter flavored and often preferred by children.

What is your Nujol story? If you have been using Nujol for ten years or more, if you are bringing up your children on it, tell us. Address Stanco Incorporated, 2 Park Avenue, New York City.

COMPTROLLER SAYS BANKS ARE STRONGER THAN EVER

J. F. T. O'Connor Reports in New York Speech on Status of Depositories.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency, told the American Acceptance Council last night that the nation's banking structure was never on "a more firm foundation than it is today."

O'Connor attributed this condition to the 1933 banking act, but said that in his annual report to Congress, now in the hands of the printer, he had recommended 12 changes and three amendments to the act.

He reported that of 1446 banks which were not licensed to reopen after the holiday last March, only 376 remained unlicensed at the close of business Jan. 25 and of these 298 had plans approved for reopening.

"The amount of frozen deposits in the 376 banks," he continued, "was $334,312,000. The figure was based on the Oct. 25 (1933) call. In other words, only 16.7 per cent of the $2,009,137,780 (the deposits of the original 1446 unlicensed banks) now remains frozen.

"If we eliminate the banks which have approved plans and consider only the banks with disapproved plans, there is but $55,889,000 remaining as frozen deposits, which represents merely 2.7 per cent of the $2,009,137,780. Let me say, however, that many of the banks with disapproved plans may still present a plan which will meet with the approval of the Comptroller's office."

"ALL-BRAN WILL ALWAYS BE A PART OF MY DIET"

Delicious Cereal Corrected His Constipation

If you suffer from constipation, read this fine letter:

"I have been troubled for years with constipation. During this time, I have tried almost every known remedy. Then some one recommended eating Kellogg's ALL-BRAN, and the proper results followed immediately.

"Since eating Kellogg's ALL-BRAN each morning, there has been a general improvement in my health without the ill effects that I formerly experienced when taking laxatives. Hereafter, Kellogg's ALL-BRAN will always be a part of my diet."—Mr. E. G. Himes, 1201 E. 7th St., Los Angeles, Calif.

Research shows Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and vitamin B to aid elimination. ALL-BRAN also supplies iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that in leafy vegetables. Isn't this "cereal way" safer than risking patent medicines?

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient to relieve ordinary constipation. With each meal, in serious cases. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Be sure to ask for Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. It contains much more needed "bulk" than part-bran products. In the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

JOHN A. HOPE NAMED BANKRUPTCY REFEREE

Attorney Appointed by U. S. District Judge Faris to Succeed Walter D. Coles.

John A. Hope, an attorney with offices in the Central National Bank Building, was appointed Referee in Bankruptcy for the St. Louis district by Federal Judge Faris today.

He succeeds Walter D. Coles, who resigned recently after serving for more than 35 years. Coles was appointed on July 1, 1898, the day the National Bankruptcy Act became effective. Hope's appointment, effective Friday, is for a term of two years.

Hope, who has had a general law practice, has appeared as attorney in a number of bankruptcy suits and has been appointed attorney for several receivers. Last year he was appointed special master to hear general matters in controversy in the Frisco Railway receivership, but when the road entered bankruptcy under the 1933 law the receivership proceedings were suspended and his services no longer were needed.

The quarters of the bankruptcy court maintained by Coles in the Security Building probably will be kept by Hope, at least temporarily. He has not decided about the disposition of his own offices, in the Central National Bank Building, but contemplates continuing some of his private practice, apart from bankruptcy matters.

Born Near Jackson, Mo., in 1869.

Hope was born on a farm near Jackson, Mo., Nov. 20, 1869. He was educated at Southeast Missouri Teachers' College, Cape Girardeau, and William Jewell College, Liberty, and read law in the office of a relative, R. B. Oliver, at Jackson, being admitted to the bar at Jackson in 1892. Before attending Jewell College he taught school two years at New Haven and Washington, Mo.

He came to St. Louis in 1906, resides at 5711 Chamberlain avenue, is married and has two daughters and a son, Brandom Hope, his law partner. A Democrat, he served on the board of managers of the Farmington State Hospital under Gov. Folk.

In the extensive railroad building in Southeast Missouri of Louis Houck of Cape Girardeau, Hope was an attorney. He represented Houck in a notable right of way suit for the Thebes Bridge. About 17 years ago he appeared in the Tyler Land & Timber Co. bankruptcy case and recently he represented a creditor in the Steinberg bankruptcy case.

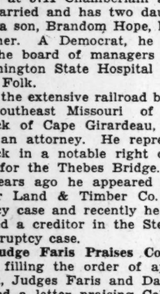

Judge Faris Praises Coles.

In filling the order of appointment, Judges Faris and Davis attached a letter praising Coles for his long and efficient service. The letter said, in part:

"On account of your insistence we are constrained to accept your resignation. In thus bringing to a conclusion your long-time official relationship with Bankruptcy Court, may we not express to you our keenest appreciation of your honest, able, energetic and most efficient services uniformly rendered in your more than 35 years' incumbency as referee.

"Your years of unbroken service render you conspicuous among referees and the outstanding ability which uniformly characterized your work accentuates that standing."

CITES SHALLOW LOGIC BEHIND THE 'NEW DEAL'

Dr. H. W. Laidler in Speech Says Various Parts of Program Conflict.

Shortcomings of the New Deal were examined by Harry W. Laidler of New York, executive director of the League for Industrial Democracy, and board chairman of the National Bureau for Economic Research, in an address under auspices of the league's local chapter last night at Soldan High School.

Dr. Laidler pointed to the rapidly widening gap between prices and wages; to the 100 per cent organization of industry, fractional organization of labor and complete unorganization of consumers; to the chaotic resultant of clashes between divergent planning in separate fields — destruction of crops as against measures for feeding the hungry, minimum wages to raise buying power as against devaluation of the dollar to raise prices, and, as the basic fault, underlying all the diverse plans, production for profit instead of production for use.

His address, one of a series sponsored by the St. Louis chapter of the League for Industrial Democracy, drew an audience of nearly 500 persons despite the forbidding cold. The next league lecture, Feb. 26, in the Soldan auditorium, will be a discussion of "Production for Use" by Norman Thomas, who was the Socialist nominee for President against Roosevelt.

Banks and Securities.

Appraising the New Deal, Laidler recounted that the banks were "a little less unsafe" but 3200 were still closed; securities did not offer the former "opportunities for wholesale fraud" but Wall Street was "still planning the issuance of securities so that the people on the plains can hold the bag."

Farm income had increased even allowing for increase in farm costs, but many branches of agriculture were still in tragic state, he said. The public works program had employed many thousands, but had fallen down on its opportunities for slum clearance.

Child labor had been immensely reduced under NRA codes, but violations were common in many industries. Referring to the pending newspaper code, he added, "Editors are organized for the continuance of child labor in the newspaper game. They say they got their first start hawking newspapers on the corner. 'If they had not had that privilege, the United States would have been deprived of their genius, and they would not now be leading America out of the wilderness into the Promised Land. America should not, through a ban on child labor, deprive its future generations of the same sort of leadership.'"

NRA Won't Absorb Jobless.

NRA had reduced the work week about 4½ hours to an average of 40 hours a week, by estimate of the American Federation of Labor. But, Laidler said, Stuart Chase had computed that a 40-hour week on the level of 1923-25 prosperity would leave 10,000,000 to 12,000,000 unemployed, and that absorption of all unemployment would require about a 26-hour week.

"Suppose we did recover," he said, "has the New Deal done anything to eliminate crises in the future? I think that perhaps for the first time in the history of civilization, we have realized that insecurity is absolutely unnecessary, that poverty is unnecessary, that we have resources to feed, clothe and shelter everyone all his life, and yet we are increasingly insecure as the years go on.

"The New Deal has not interfered with the great monopolies, and it has given trade associations, with their new privilege of price-fixing, greater power than ever before." Citing the five-figure expenditures for pleasure of a young girl, heir to dime-store millions, he remarked that her income was equivalent to that of 1400 to 1500 workers.

"Under this system of economics," he commented, "that is possible not through a difference in production, of contribution to society, but through difference in ownership. So long as we have a system of such inequalities, we are going to have periods of unemployment. So long as we have monopolies, we shall have these inequalities."

"It is our duty," he said, "to insist on higher standards of living, the abolition of child labor, a 30-hour week, the stronger organization of labor, higher minimum wages, a comprehensive works program, continuation of the CWA and an amendment to the Constitution to legalize old age and unemployment insurance. Fundamentally, it is up to us to insist that industry must reorganize on a basis of production for use, of social control of the production of things on which our lives depend."

"Socialism is what I advocate," he said in the question period following the lecture. "If we all fold our hands and depend on the great white father at Washington to lead us out of this, we'll drift into some sort of economic chaos.

"And I think that, if we do drift into a stage of violence, the people who get control will not be the people on the Left, but the people who believe in some sort of Fascist control. However, the stronger the organization of workers, the less painful will be the transition when it comes, and the sooner shall we have a co-operative commonwealth."

PASTOR IN TAX FRAUD IS FREED ON PAROLE

The Rev. Clarence A. Lackey Pays $50 Fine and Court Costs.

The Rev. Clarence A. Lackey, Baptist minister and part-time bookkeeper, sentenced to 11 months and 29 days in jail for preparing a false income tax return, was paroled by Federal Judge Faris today for three years.

A condition of the parole, which Judge Faris himself proposed when he sentenced Lackey Jan. 22, was that the fine of $50 and court costs be paid. That was done, largely with funds contributed by members of the congregations of three East Side Baptist churches.

Before presenting his formal application for parole Lackey visited the office of the Clerk of the Court and paid the fine, plus costs, which totaled $149. He was accompanied by the Rev. Ely Lamb Jr., pastor of the Winstanley Baptist Church in East St. Louis. Lackey is pastor of the Highway Tabernacle Mission at Cahokia, which is maintained by that church.

The Rev. Mr. Lamb said members of the Winstanley, Lansdowne and Rosemont churches had contributed toward the needed fund as had Lackey's personal friends. The last $50 required, he said, was borrowed money.

Lackey has continued to conduct services at his mission and a committee of the congregation adopted a resolution expressing confidence in his integrity.

The parole application was presented to Judge Faris in his chambers and the courtroom scene was brief. The order of parole was formally entered while Lackey remained seated in the spectators' section.

He was found guilty by a jury of assisting in preparing a false income tax return for the Crescent Steel Co. of St. Louis in 1929. The steel company, whose plant at 6900 South Broadway has been closed for nearly two years, reported net taxable income for that year of $7607 and paid a tax of $506. The Government contended the company's net taxable income actually was $34,516, on which a tax of $3294 should have been paid.

Lackey's defense was that he assisted in preparing the return in good faith, using data supplied to him by the vice-president of the company, Raymond B. Pautler. Pautler recently pleaded "no contest" to a tax evasion indictment in the same matter and was sentenced to three months in jail and fined $5000.

FUNERAL SERVICES THURSDAY FOR PRIEST WHO WAS FLYER

Father Peter Barabino Died Sunday at Mt. St. Rose Hospital.

Funeral services for the Rev. Peter Barabino, airplane pilot and pastor of St. Ambrose Catholic Church, will be held at the church, Cooper street and Wilson avenue, at 9 a. m. Thursday.

Father Barabino, who was 53 years old, died Sunday at Mount St. Rose Hospital of a complication of ailments, chief of which was heart disease. He had been ill more than a month. He spent the last 10 days of his life with his brothers, Giuseppe and Giovanni, who arrived from Italy in response to his summons a few days before he was taken to the hospital a week ago.

More than four years ago Father Barabino, a familiar figure at Lambert-St. Louis Field, began taking flying instruction. After he had qualified for his private pilot's license, in the summer of 1930, he purchased an airplane. In September, 1930, the plane crashed in a forced landing on the airport at St. James, Mo., during a storm, and he was slightly injured.

Born in San Remo, Father Barabino was ordained in Italy. Tonight his body will be removed from the Calcaterra undertaking establishment to the church, where it will be until the funeral services.

DEWEY GODFREY MENTIONED FOR CITY LIQUOR JOB

Chairman of Democratic Committee Suggested as Possible Appointee as Excise Commissioner.

Dewey Godfrey, lawyer and chairman of the Democratic City Committee, was mentioned about City Hall today as a possible appointee to the office of Excise Commissioner, after that office shall be created by passage of a liquor control ordinance.

The appointment, which under charter provisions must be made by the Director of Public Safety, will be decided by Mayor Dickmann's wishes. He has offered the place to former Judge Jesse A. McDonald, who has declined. Members of the Board of Aldermen have urged the appointment of Lawrence McDaniel, former Circuit Attorney and Democratic nominee for Mayor in 1929.

Godfrey, a former St. Louis University football player, weighing 225 pounds, has the physical qualifications for the Excise Commissionership as stated by the late Gov. Hadley when he appointed Henry S. Caulfield to that position. "I want a fat man for Excise Commissioner," Gov. Hadley said, it being his view that a thin, nervous man could not stand the worries and controversies of the place.

Godfrey is known to his acquaintances as an abstainer from liquor, yet he is thought to have an understanding of the liquor dealer's problems, his father having been in that business. He is close to Mayor Dickmann, whom he supported from the inception of his candidacy, and he took an active part in the hospital bond issue campaign and the Mayor's Christmas party.

Against One-Man Rule.

Saloon keepers, present and prospective, seem generally opposed to the idea of one-man rule by an Excise Commissioner, with sole power to revoke licenses, not subject to appeal or review. This was the principle of the old State law creating the St. Louis Excise Commissionership. Under that law, it was possible to keep the saloons in line politically, by the arbitrary power of revoking licenses. It was also possible to use this power in the interest of strict law enforcement, and it was so used by Gov. Folk and his Excise Commissioner, T. E. Mulvihill.

The pending Dickmann administration bill proposes to create an Excise Commissioner with full authority to issue and revoke licenses, subject only to the State Supervisor. The two substitute bills, offered by Aldermen Gummels and Brown, propose a board of appeals, to pass on revocation of licenses. Most of the saloon men appear to desire such a board. Alderman Poole, chairman of the Public Safety Committee, said today that the City Counselor might be asked whether provision for such a board of appeals would harmonize with the new State law.

Hotel men will continue to urge that existing hotels be excepted from the section of the proposed ordinance which states that places for sale of liquor by the drink shall be not nearer than 250 feet to a church, school or park. Hotel Jefferson is across the street from a church, as are the Coronado and Melbourne Hotel, and several hotels are within the specified distance of parks.

The State Retail Liquor Dealers' Association, one of two local organizations of saloon keepers, has called a meeting for Thursday night in Debrecht's Hall, 2101 Lynch street. It invites a general attendance of those interested in the pending legislation.

There was talk today of postponing the Public Safety Committee's hearing on the liquor ordinance, set for Friday night, because of a wrestling match on that night, which Aldermen wish to attend.

Objections to Surety Rule.

Agents of surety companies are endeavoring to have Edwin J. Becker, State Supervisor of Liquor Control, change his ruling that only personal sureties will be accepted on bonds required under the new State liquor law for sale and manufacture of liquor.

Becker originally decided to require corporate surety bonds, but changed to personal sureties in the belief the corporate rates were too high. Today Becker explained to the Post-Dispatch that he meant the personal bonds to be signed by two sureties, in addition to the applicant for a license. Some insurance men had interpreted a state-

Objections to Surety Rule.

Agents of surety companies are endeavoring to have Edwin J. Becker, State Supervisor of Liquor Control, change his ruling that only personal sureties will be accepted on bonds required under the new State liquor law for sale and manufacture of liquor.

Becker originally decided to require corporate surety bonds, but changed to personal sureties in the belief the corporate rates were too high. Today Becker explained to the Post-Dispatch that he meant the personal bonds to be signed by two sureties, in addition to the applicant for a license. Some insurance men had interpreted a statement by Becker Saturday to mean that only the applicant would sign the bond.

The bond is set at $2000. The only rate the companies could quote, according to Edward G. Marsh Jr., a St. Louis agent, was under a provision in their manual for bonds to the Federal Government under the former prohibition law. This was $20 per $1000, or $40 for a bond to the State. Becker asserted the risk was not large enough to justify this charge, and said a fee of $10 or $15 for the $2000 bond would be fair.

The Towner Rating Bureau, New York, which establishes rates nationally for surety companies, has been asked to fix a specific rate for the Missouri bond.

Questions of Liability.

"A lot of questions as to liability were raised by the insurance men," said Becker. "I told them it looked like their bonds were not worth that much money. Now they want me to consider a $20 rate. I had a conference on the bond question at Kansas City Sunday. I don't want to say whom I talked with, because it might complicate matters."

Becker said the two sureties signing a bond, other than the applicant, would be required to make sworn statements of their financial condition, to show their qualification. The supervisor said he would check the statements, but conceded this would be a large task.

The State law provides that before any application for a license to sell or manufacture intoxicating liquor shall be approved, the Supervisor shall require the applicant to give the State a $2000 bond, "with sufficient surety," subject to the Supervisor's approval. The bond will be conditioned that the applicant shall keep an orderly establishment, see that minors do not obtain liquor, refrain from violating the State law, and pay all taxes, inspection and license fees, fines, penalties or forfeitures which may be adjudged under the act.

In another clause, relating to licenses for retail establishments selling liquor by the drink, reference is again made to the bond. Here it says the bond "must be given for the faithful performance of all duties imposed by law upon the licensee, and for the faithful performance of all the requirements of this act, and any violation of such conditions, duties or requirements shall be a breach of said bond and shall automatically cancel and forfeit the license granted hereunder." It is further provided in this clause that no one financially interested in the sale of liquor shall be acceptable as surety.

A Man's Size Job.

Surety company agents are trying to determine whether the law requires forfeiture of full value of the bond or only requires the surety to pay any specific fine or penalty for violation.

"If it's a forfeiture bond," said Marsh, "$40 is dirt cheap for it. It would really be a financial guarantee that the applicant is worth $2000. Becker is taking on a man's sized job if he undertakes to see that every personal surety bond is collectible. If the bond should be forfeited, the surety company would be entitled to collect from the principal—if it could. It has been proved that personal sureties are unsatisfactory and largely uncollectible, and it is becoming harder to get individuals to sign. If this is to be a non-forfeiture bond, the rating bureau may give a lower rate, after studying the Missouri law."

Becker told the Post-Dispatch the question of whether the bonds might be forfeited was one for the Attorney-General. He questioned whether the State would care to bother to sue on bonds except in serious cases. "The biggest punishment," he said, "is the power of license revocation, which is in my hands. The bond is more of a moral obligation than anything else."

The pending Dickmann administration bill would require a licensee to post a $2000 bond furnished by a surety company.

SURRENDERS, ADMITS STEALING $75 FROM FORMER EMPLOYER

Robert J. Bennett Once Janitor in Shoe Repair Shop Took Money Year Ago.

A warrant charging grand larceny was issued yesterday against Robert J. Bennett, former janitor in the shoe repair shop of Melvin Johnson, 3320 Laclede avenue, who surrendered to police Sunday with the announcement that he had stolen $75 from Johnson more than a year ago.

Bennett, who is 20 years old, told police that he had been without a home and Johnson had given him room and board in exchange for janitor work. On Jan. 21, 1933, he continued, he stole $75 from Johnson's pocket and fled with the money. Since then he has been traveling about the country.

He decided to surrender, Bennett said, "because I was tired of having the police after me."

REGENT IN POWER IN TIBET TILL BABY RULER IS FOUND

NEW DELHI, India, Jan. 30.—Tibet, the so-called forbidden land, has a new ruler in the head Lama of Reting Monastery, two days' journey north of Lhasa. He will be installed as Regent, pending discovery of a new incarnation of the late Dalai Lama.

Meanwhile, all Tibet prays and hunts for babies born about the hour of Dalai Lama's death last month at Lhasa, the capital.

Holy men examine the heads of all infants to see if they bear distinctive marks laid down by tradition. The belief is that when the Dalai Lama, spiritual and temporal ruler of Tibet, died his spirit entered the body of a baby born at that moment

Gray Hair

Best Remedy is Made At Home

You can now make at home a better gray hair remedy by following this simple recipe: To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it yourself at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained.

Barbo imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair, making it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

DALADIER FORMS CABINET, FRANCE'S 8TH IN TWO YEARS

New Government Composed of Veterans of the Center, Neither Conservative Nor Radical.

WAR MINISTER MEANS FIRMNESS TO HITLER

Col. Fabry Was Marshal Joffre's Aid — Budget and Stavisky Scandal Also Awaiting Action.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 30.—Edouard Daladier succeeded today in organizing a new government—the eighth in France within two years—and prepared to tackle the problems of the country. The new cabinet is of the center, neither Radical nor Conservative. Daladier will have the foreign affairs portfolio.

It is composed mainly of veteran statesmen, and, significantly, Col. Jean Fabry, who was Marshal Joffre's aide-de-camp during the war. Appointment of Fabry, veteran one-legged fighting man, as Minister of War, was regarded as a clear indication of a strong policy toward Chancellor Hitler of Germany.

Others in Cabinet.

Others in the cabinet are: Eugene Penancier, Justice; Eugene Frot, Interior; Pierre Cot, Air; Francois Pietri, Finance and the Budget; Emile Berthod, Education; Jean Mistler, Commerce; Henri Queuille, Agriculture; Joseph Paganon, Public Works; Jean Valadier, Labor; Henri de Jouvenel, Colonies; Hippolyte Ducos, Pensions; Paul Bernier, Posts and Telegraphs; Emil Lisbonne, Public Health; Louis de Chappendelaine, Marine, and Guy Lachambre, Merchant Marine.

Daladier dropped all the powerful names of the Ministry of Premier Camille Chautemps, which resigned Saturday. He retains only a few minor members whose names are free of all whispers of connection with the Bayonne pawnshop scandal. Besides Daladier himself, only seven were held over from the Chautemps cabinet.

The new government is composed of four Senators—Penancier, Valadier, De Jouvenel and Lisbonne—and 21 deputies. Penancier, who will have the chief burden of speeding justice and quieting the rumors of governmental corruption, is president of the Senate's committee on civil and criminal legislation.

The new Cabinet was presented to President Lebrun immediately.

For Speedy, If Brutal, Cleanup.

When he left the Elysee Palace, Premier Daladier said: "It is necessary to bring this scandal to an end with, if necessary, brutal rapidity, and shed on it all the light that the public demands."

Even as the new Cabinet was formed, the taxicab drivers of Paris increased their strike manifestations. They weaved slowly back and forth across the boulevards, snarling traffic while hundreds of police gestured vainly and frantically and spectators stood by and laughed. In Toulon they observed the same tactics, tying up traffic for an hour.

Working without a break since early yesterday when he agreed to attempt to form a new government, to replace the Chautemps ministry Daladier broke off consultations at 1 a. m. and said he would present a full Cabinet to President Lebrun today.

Three Principal Problems.

Daladier faces the task of pulling France out of one of the worst moral, political and economic bogs in the history of the Third Republic. He will have three big jobs:

To clean up the Bayonne Bank scandal; punish any high officials involved; and reform the antiquated judicial and police system which some Government leaders say made the scandal possible.

To get the budget for 1934 balanced and approved.

Eighth Cabinet in Two Years.

There have been seven Cabinets in two years. The average tenure is eight months. The most serious problem has been that of balancing the budget. It was from 4,000,000,000 to 6,000,000,000 francs "in the red" at the end of 1933. The 1934 budget, as it now stands, is balanced in theory—thanks partly to the Government pay cuts which resulted in manifestations by the 800,000 employes.

Several thousand rioters tore down carnival decorations along the Promenade des Anglais in Nice last night and clashed with police. Sixty-five persons were taken to hospitals. Women school teachers and hundreds of public employes joined the rioters.

OGDEN MILLS WARNS AGAINST "REGIMENTED ECONOMY" AS FIXTURE OF NATIONAL LIFE

"Guarantee of Individual Rights Against the Arbitrary Power of the Government" Destroyed by NRA Regulations, Former Secretary of Treasury Tells Kansas Republicans.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 30.—Asserting that the Democratic administration is attempting to extend governmental powers beyond constitutional limits and is putting "enormously expanded authority in the hands of a single individual," Ogden L. Mills, Secretary of the Treasury under President Hoover, last night expressed his faith in the ability of the Republican Party "to develop a program based on time-tested principles to meet the new conditions of the day."

"Where Do We Go From Here" was the subject of his address to Kansas Republicans celebrating the seventy-third anniversary of statehood.

The immediate function of the opposition party "is to see that all important policies are subjected to such scrutiny, discussion and consideration as will permit the people to form a just appreciation of their wisdom and desirability," he told the Kansas Day Club, because "even now there is a willingness to adopt the most sweeping measures without that consideration which would permit the forming and expression of public opinion, and an obvious impatience with any criticism."

"Free discussion and informed public opinion are incompatible with the planned and managed national life which seems to be the ultimate objective of the present administration," he concluded.

"We are witnessing revolutionary changes in our governmental and economic structures without popular mandate. We are being presented with a series of accomplished acts, the consequences of which in the future life of the nation are incalculable, and, in the name of national solidarity in time of stress, the voice of the people is afforded no opportunity to become audible."

Constitutional Safeguards.

Taking up the question of constitutionality of certain phases of the "New Deal," Mills asserted that "any infraction or suspension of the fundamental law is a challenge to popular sovereignty."

Since no provision has been made for suspension of the Constitution in time of emergency, he said, "this must unquestionably be due to the recognition that one of its most precious values is that it stands as a safeguard of our rights and liberties in times of stress.

"If, then, the Congress and the President, by mere declaration of an emergency, can in effect suspend the limitations of the fundamental law, it must be apparent that constitutional government as understood throughout our history ceases to exist, and that the Federal Goverment may be transformed overnight from a government of limited powers to one of unlimited authority over the life of every individual citizen.

"Not only have we witnessed what I believe is an unconstitutional attempt to extend the powers of the Federal Government beyond the limits contemplated by the basic law, but the exercise of the enormously expanded authority has been vested in the hands of a single individual, so that the citizen is deprived not only of the protection of the fundamental law, but is subjected to arbitrary executive action freed from the restrictions of legislative control. The abdication by the Congress and the delegation of powers to the executive are in effect creating a government of men without any practical limitations of law."

"Liberty Is Dead."

In an attack on the monetary legislation which the former head of the Treasury pointed out directly affected every individual in the nation, Mills declared. "We have to turn back many centuries to the days of absolute autocrats to find so great a power over the lives of millions of men lodged in the hands of a single fallible human being."

As for the NRA, he accused the "Federal executive" of attempting to establish bureaucratic control over all business and industry, "and over the economic activities of the individual citizen." The power of the President to refuse a license, Mills asserted, gives him "the power to destroy, even without resort to the vicious policy of boycott, the business of any man who refuses to comply with the arbitrary rules laid down by the central government."

He declared NRA regulations "definitely violate the letter and spirit of the Constitution." "They abolish the sovereignties of the states," he continued. "They make of a government of limited powers one of unlimited authority over the lives of us all. They destroy America's greatest contribution to the cause of human freedom—the guarantee of individual rights against the arbitrary power of the Government.

"If the Federal Government, acting through a centralized bureaucracy, may reach out to the furthest corners of this immense land, and regulate the daily life and occupations of the individual, liberty as we have understood it is dead, and a nation of free men will have become an aggregation of regimented subjects."

No Freedom in Utopia.

"In this Utopia to which the President is leading us, neither free discussion nor liberty will be tolerable; men will no longer be free in the sense that they may plan their own lives, but are to be regimented, directed and ruled by an all-powerful state.

"Our ancestors gave their lives to make the individual the master of his own destiny, and the state the servant rather than the master of the people. * * * Are we to destroy this inheritance, and to tear up the charter of our liberties in the vain hope that a small group of men, selected through political processes, may direct with greater sureness and foresight the life of the nation than the people themselves? * * * The truth is that there exists in the world today no man or group of men who can visualize, much less direct, the countless small streams that united to form the mighty river of American economic life."

Since the emergency measures are accomplished facts, Mills said, little can be done now, but he urged the Republican party to "resist to the utmost" if an effort is made "to make a regimented economy a permanent feature of our national life."

Where Mills Draws Line.

Mills said he thought the National Recovery Act should be limited to industries national in scope. He would permit these to adopt agreements, subject to Government regulation, "for their guidance," to eliminate unfair and unsound practices.

"But this is something very different from the wholesale attempt to reorganize business and industry of the country by substituting detailed bureaucratic control in the place of regulated individual control," he said. "It is perfectly possible to preserve a free economic system based on the maintenance of competition, and at the same time provide that business and industry may check abuses and promote progress through the formulation of policies for their own guidance, subject to Government regulation based upon law. Surely, some way can be found of harmonizing the self-expression and liberty of the individual with the welfare of all."

"Spending Our Way Out."

Mills called the administration's policy of using the national credit to finance its recovery program "an uneconomic process."

"But while it continues, it produces an appearance of business prosperity, stimulating as it does an increased demand for goods; and with basic forces the world working toward recovery, it may help lead to a resumption of normal economic activities," he conceded. He warned, however, that the process cannot be continued indefinitely since there is a limit to national credit.

"Again it is idle to debate the wisdom or lack of wisdom of this attempt to spend our way out of the depression. We are definitely committed to this course, and we must now devote our best thoughts and efforts to make the venture successful. The problem resolves itself into a race between business recovery and the exhaustion of the national credit."

He urged Republicans to oppose "public squandering," asserting that we are in danger of "creating a whole series of vested interests that cannot be subsidized indefinitely from the public purse, and yet may politically become so powerful as to make it difficult for public officers to resist their demands."

Obstacles to Recovery.

As an obstacle to recovery, Mills cited "the administration's apparent faith in the value of a rise in prices per se, even if brought about by artificial means, such as monetary manipulation." Conceding that higher prices might help debtors and that a rise in prices of agricultural products is necessary for a better balanced price structure, he asserted that "a general rise in prices which tends to restrict industrial production is clearly undesirable and opposed to the goal sought to be attained by other means." From this viewpoint, he said, certain features of the NRA are definite obstacles to recovery. The NRA, he asserted, reversed the normal process of recovery in expecting increased volume of production to follow increases in wages, costs and prices.

"Unless the increased production does come, failure is inevitable," he said, "and to date the evidence indicates that the National Recovery

SKELETONS, URNS IN ANOTHER TOMB AT MONTE ALBAN

Mexican Archeologists Report Further Discoveries in Excavations in Oaxaca.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO, D. F., Jan. 30. — The opening of another tomb at Monte Alban, Oaxaca, containing valuable relics of ancient Indian civilizations, was reported today by Dr. Alfonso Caso, Government archeologist. The tomb was described as very spacious, with rounded roof and walls perfectly preserved.

Several human skeletons were found. On each side along the walls were five beautifully decorated urns. The discovery is expected to throw additional light on the civilization of the Mixtec and Zapotecan Indian races, which occupied Monte Alban at different times.

D. Caso also discovered the jewels found in tomb No. 7 which were exhibited in the United States last year. Tomb No. 7 was said to be the most important archeological discovery ever made in the Western Hemisphere. The new tomb has been designated No. 40.

DR. COMPTON RECEIVES DATA ON COSMIC RAY FROM BYRD

Says It Tends to Show They Are "Partly Electrical in Nature."

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 30. — Dr. Arthur H. Compton, who has been studying cosmic rays for years, yesterday announced that Commander Richard E. Byrd had sent him new exploratory data tending to show the rays are "partly electrical in nature."

The University of Chicago scientist said the Antarctic voyager had wirelessed him information picked up by delicate instruments prior to time the expedition reached New Zealand.

Dr. Compton explained that the new data amounted to this: Confirmation that the rays are affected by the earth's megnetic field, and at least in part are electrical in nature. The instruments picked up increased intensity in the ray as Byrd left the Equator and traveled southward.

BRITISH MUSEUM DENIES PLEA FAMOUS CODEX WAS STOLEN

Refuses to Give Up Fourth Century Bible Manuscript to Monastery on Mount Sinai.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—The British Museum refused last night to give up the famous fourth century Biblical manuscript, the Codex Sinaiticus, to the monastery of Mount Sinai, where it was discovered in the middle of the last century by the Biblical scholar, Lobegott von Tischendorf.

The return of the manuscript, for which the British Museum has agreed to pay the Soviet Russian Government $500,000, was sought by Monsignor Athenagoras, Archbishop of the Greek Orthodox Church, who said it had been stolen from the monastery.

The British Museum quoted from Tischendorf's book, published in 1871, that the monastery had given the manuscript to the Czar in 1869.

All other buildings in the town, like most of those near the Pacific coast in Guerrero, were damaged. Authorities notified police agencies here that their help would not be needed.

HOPKINS TO SEEK NEW HOMES FOR MILLION JOBLESS

Plans to Move Unemployed From Districts Where They Are Stranded by Closing of Industries.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—A movement designed to rehabilitate hundreds of thousands of unemployed now in communities where industry has stagnated is planned by the administration.

The purpose is to move thousands of unemployed to new areas.

The plan, part of the President's land policy, is to be put into operation by the Federal Surplus Relief Corporation. To carry it on, Harry L. Hopkins, president of the corporation and Administrator of Emergency Relief and Civil Works, has employed Lawrence Westbrook, Civil Works and Relief Administrator for Texas.

Committee Working Out Plan.

Plans for starting the movement are being worked out by a committee headed by Jacob Baker, Assistant Civil Works Administrator, on which are Rexford Tugwell and Mordecal Ezekiel of the Department of Agriculture and Conrad H. Wirth and Dale K. Parrott of the Interior Department. Hopkins said the committee was about ready to make definite recommendation.

The plan is to operate first in connection with the purchase of sub-marginal lands for which the Public Works Administration has allotted $25,000,000.

The movement eventually will involve districts where coal, copper and other mines have closed, leaving a stranded population, and in large industrial centers where industries have closed leaving thousands out of work who may never

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare; never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

High Prices and Prosperity.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

FOR the past 10 months I have watched the Roosevelt administration and I have found it good. The sincere, bold and, for the most part, intelligent efforts of the President to pull us out of the depression and to create a new economic order are commendable in the extreme.

Concerning the monetary policies of the administration, I have great doubts. I do not presume to criticise the President, but there is one thing that I would like to have explained: Among the expressed purposes of the gold-buying program and the proposed devaluation law are the reduction of debts and the increase of exports. That is well and good. But the chief purpose of the dollar juggling is to raise the general price level to something near that of 1926. It is argued that higher prices will result in larger returns to the producer and thereby aid recovery.

It seems to me that the administration has become confused on cause and effect. High prices do not cause prosperity; prosperity causes high prices. When people have jobs, they buy things, and the increased demand causes a rise in prices. The creation of more and always more jobs is what we need, not an artificial lifting of the price level.

HARRY SHERIDAN.

Altamont, Ill.

The Duelist Who Was Hanged.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IN his most interesting and witty talk on St. Louis duels before the Missouri Historical Society, McCune Gill brought out the unique fact that, as a result of a duel on Bloody Island in 1820, one principal was hanged. The seconds got together and put nothing but powder in the pistols. One of the principals caught on to this, and surreptitiously inserted a ball into his weapon. He killed his man, but was immediately accused of murder, convicted and hanged. This is the only case in United States history in which a duelist's life was taken by the law.

CYRIL CLEMENS.

The Need for High-Class Legislators.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

RE your editorial, "The Special Session," the Illinois State Senator (J. O. Monroe) is perfectly right in implying that we should have self-respecting legislators, responsible to the people and capable of acting on their own judgment; but it seems to me that the Post-Dispatch has amply proved that they are not self-respecting, not responsible to the people, and not capable of acting on their own judgment.

If the State Senator really wishes to serve the people, let him heed the Post-Dispatch editorial, "An Opportunity for Public Service," which strikes at the fundamental weakness of all democracies from the time of Plato on, viz., the lack of means of selecting the best-fitted men for office.

In our Legislatures especially, we need men, not puppets. We need our wisest, most honest, most capable men, specially trained. How can the people get such men nominated for their vote? This is the question the people want their legislators to answer.

Let the Senator cogitate the proposal of Will Durant on this point, if he, like the Post-Dispatch, is committed to progress and reform, to the fight against demagogues, and to devotion to the public welfare. A. W. SHAKLEE.

Warning to the G. O. P.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THIS is a solemn warning to those Republicans who are still "asleep." You will never again get into power unless and until you not only see the trend of events, but act accordingly.

As long as you continue to permit yourselves to be led by big business, bankers and the moneyed interests, there is no hope for you. As long as the heartless public utilities, the grafting milk distributors, crafty insurance companies, packers and manufacturers of necessities, etc., are permitted to filch from the public, and dole out but a pittance of their profits to their employes and beneficiaries, who are their wealth-producers, there can be no peace or lasting prosperity.

Unless and until the Republican party shakes off the above yoke, and puts up more truly progressive candidates than our present good progressive President Roosevelt is, it will never again seat a President in the White House.

A PROGRESSIVE REPUBLICAN.

Why Latin Is Used.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IN reply to H. R. Rockwell's objection to the use of Latin in prescriptions: If prescriptions were written in English, the one prescribed for would have a chance to write prescriptions for himself and procure drugs that are to be used only at a doctor's order. Also, he might try to compound for himself the medicine which, in a lot of cases, should be compounded by those whose type of education demands the knowledge of Latin. (In this, I refer to druggists, etc.)

The example given by Mr. Rockwell, in which a doctor asks for an estimate on a piece of work and the estimate is returned in a language foreign to the doctor, is an absolutely unparalle. case. A prescription is not a diagnosis. Any doctor will tell you what he sees fit to inform you about your case. We do not have to accept anything which we do not wish to. J. RICHARD COMPTON.

REGULATING THE STOCK EXCHANGES.

To regulate and so curb the excesses of the stock exchanges is one of the major necessities of our American civilization. We cannot always permit men in the United States, using the picturesque phrase of Dr. Edwin G. Nourse of the Brookings Institution, to "do what their forbears were forbidden to do in Europe."

Strict Federal regulation of stock exchanges through a licensing system and a Federal administrator is recommended to Congress by President Roosevelt's interdepartmental committee in a report which has just been made public by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee.

According to Senator Fletcher, chairman of the Senate committee, the report lays at the doors of the exchanges a large part of the responsibility for the depression. Secretary of Commerce Roper is chairman of the interdepartmental committee. In a letter transmitting the report to President Roosevelt, Secretary Roper enumerates the following major recommendations:

1. That exchanges shall receive Federal license as a condition permitting the use of the mails and of interstate commerce instrumentalities for transmitting their quotations in all communications respecting sales and other transactions on such exchanges.

2. That there be established an administrative authority with broad discretionary powers to require the exchanges to adopt and enforce rules and regulations in a form satisfactory to the administrative agency and of such character as to establish a minimum standard of fair dealing on such exchanges.

3. That there be adopted rules and regulations which, in the event of violation, would give the Federal agency authority either to deprive such an exchange of its license or to suspend it or fine it, or to require a change in its governing personnel.

4. That the form and content of stock exchange rules governing such matters as pools, margin trading, specialists, short selling, listing requirements, retailing methods, reports and accounting, shall not be set forth in detail in the statute, but shall be left to be prescribed by the administrative agency in accordance with the broad standards of the statute and above a certain minimum requirement.

That the Government is in earnest is generally accepted in the exchanges. This explains the conservatism of the present market. Like Othello, who found his occupation gone, the speculators and manipulators whose excesses reached their climax on Black Thursday have not played their racket since the Roosevelt administration came into power. They realize that the rupture between Washington and Wall Street is complete. For the first time in many years, the Wall Street speculators have not been enjoying from Washington advance tips of Treasury moves. This was formerly one of their chief sources of profit. The Roosevelt administration keeps all such operations secret. Here is what the Trader, whose financial column in Barron's financial weekly is widely read, says of the situation:

> The big bank-security affiliates and the big individual operators who used to make the markets of the past have all seen the handwriting on the wall, and to all intent have virtually retired from the speculative arena, the former under compulsion, the latter from aversion to the publicity certain to follow a "coup" that only wholesale activities would make possible.

There is nothing new in all this. It is what happened in England after the South Sea Bubble, and it is what happened in France after the Mississippi Bubble. The Prosperity Bubble pointed the way to reform in our own country exactly as its predecessors pointed the way to reform in Europe. The unregulated exchanges of the United States are unique in the civilized world. If we have tolerated them because we somehow thought them to be essential to the national development, we must by this time realize that they are the greatest of all impediments to a rational society.

The test of our sincerity in applying the lessons of the great bull market, its appalling swindles and its shocking revelations of dishonesty in high places, will come in this debate. It is not a matter which a day can settle. The exchanges are powerful, and they have powerful allies. They will do their utmost to convince the Government that they can regulate themselves. Perhaps, before this battle can be won, Mr. Pecora will have to put some more landgoing pirates in dry dock.

A few more tales for our own Arabian Nights series will effectually dispose of the plea for self-regulation.

PREVENTING AUTO THEFTS.

With the addition of Illinois this year, the number of states requiring certificates of title to automobiles has now reached 26. The sooner this number is expanded to include all the states of the Union, the better it will be. Stolen autos are of value to rings of auto thieves only for sale purposes. Where there is little or no market for stolen cars, auto stealing soon becomes ineffective or negligible. That certificate of title statutes are an important means to this end is the experience of states which have such laws. Michigan, the home of the auto, so to speak, appropriately led the way, with Pennsylvania, and Missouri was among the first to follow their lead.

Since Missouri began to require a transfer of title with all transfers of cars, recovery of stolen machines in St. Louis has reached about 92 per cent. Another effect is to stimulate car ownership. Secretary of State Edward J. Hughes of Illinois predicts that with the protection of the new law in force, 25,000 residents of his State will buy cars this year for the first time, thus putting $15,000,000 into business. States which do not have such laws would do well to enact them, in order to make more effective the work of those states which do.

VICTORY AT PORTSMOUTH.

Let us hitch-hike over to Portsmouth, O., and turn the clock back to November and look at a town on which manna is falling in fairly copious showers. There the sovereign voters are about to ratify or repudiate an ordinance providing for a municipal electric plant.

The repudiationists won. They won with what an ancient political metaphor called "the sinews of war." They had canvassers who, like a visitation of locusts, swarmed from door to door. Some of them were paid the sweat-shop stipend of $3; but the inquisitorial artists among them got as much as $500, which is a pretty handsome requital, whether in gold, silver or Alfred E. Smithsonian boloney. And on the day of the balloting there were challengers at every polling place, in every precinct, to see that all went well.

The commander of the repudiationists was a man named Higgins, Portsmouth manager of the Ohio Power Co., whose statement of the campaign's finances showed expenditures of $10,800, and a contribution from the American Gas & Electric Co. of $10,802. Wherefore, it is deduced that Generalissimo Higgins had all the money he needed, plus a $2 bill. The municipal ownership crowd had a fund of $220.

A charming episode in the story tells of a carnival held by a little suburban church, for which the Ohio Power Co. donated the electricity for lighting and cooking. It frankly confessed its generosity, too, in cards liberally distributed, which asked the brethren to remember this bit of noble philanthropy when they voted. The brethren, apparently, remembered.

So, municipal ownership was beaten, and the Power Trust has won another victory, and what if it did cost $10,000? The Power Trust will get it back.

THAT MELLON MONOPOLY.

For more than 20 years, the Aluminum Co. of America, a Mellon family concern, has been under suspicion as a monopoly in restraint of trade. Back in 1912, the Government filed an anti-trust suit against it. The company did not contest. Under a consent decree, the practices complained of were foresworn. There has been a good deal of litigation since, governmental and private, together with official investigation and departmental rulings, but the Aluminum Co. has gone serenely and imperially on its way, its style uncramped.

It reached apogee in 1929, its net income exceeding $25,000,000. Even so, it wasn't satisfied. The next year, when the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill was before Congress, it sought, and got, additional protection. That was one of the instances of insatiable avarice, it may be recalled, that inspired Senator Borah's moving denunciation of "unconscionable profits."

The company is still "on the spot." Attorney-General Cummings has just described it as a "100-per-cent monopoly." In a press conference, he has explained that an investigation undertaken by a previous administration has made a report which he intends to have scrutinized and rechecked "by other and different investigators."

Meantime, the company faces inquiry from another quarter. An NRA code for the aluminum industry is under negotiation. And the impression, widely prevalent, that the National Industrial Recovery Act is a sort of Mount Ararat for big business is likely to be punctured. We quoted Donald Richberg last Sunday to the effect that this act has not suspended the anti-trust laws; that it does not grant immunity from prosecution for practices in restraint of trade; that, at most, it gives the various organizations of an industry the privilege of co-operating, through their trade associations or other agencies, to a degree heretofore enjoined, but that such privileges do not include a license to institute or revive illegal practices in restraint of trade. The act has laid no healing hands on monopoly and purged it of its vices. A trust that ruthlessly crushes a competitor by violence or intrigue or any abominable device, old or new, is still a trust and answerable to the law.

What a gay and unexpected phenomenon it would be if the NRA code should clip the wings of the Aluminum Co. of America, after 20 years of futile governmental endeavor! Something to make the angels weep—tears of joy.

ARKANSAS' REFUNDING BILL.

It may be that the refunding bill just passed by the Arkansas Legislature, of necessity a compromise measure, will not entirely meet the expectations of bondholders; it may be that the estimates of revenue on which it is based are optimistic; it may be that, in three or four years, a further readjustment will be necessary; but we believe it represents a sincere and honorable effort to settle a perplexing problem.

Arkansas, during the depression, has been one of the hardest hit of all states. It was visited by the modern counterparts of the plagues of Egypt, including bank failures, drouth and ruinous prices for cotton, one of the State's chief sources of income. It was also preyed upon by investment bankers, who, in the easy-money period prior to the 1929 crash, persuaded the State to increase its indebtedness beyond a prudent point. Moreover, the same investment bankers misrepresented the wealth of Arkansas in circulars describing the bonds. Without such misrepresentation, many of them could not have been sold.

Widely criticised as a "repudiating State," principally by those who had no other interest in the matter except to extract their pound of flesh, Arkansas is now silencing its critics. To put the State's financial house in order entails hardship. For instance, under the refunding bill, the State's gasoline tax is increased to 7½ cents per gallon, including the 1-cent Federal tax. However, if the business upturn continues and if cotton prices are affected favorably by the devaluation of the dollar, as is expected, there is every reason to believe Arkansas will come through with colors flying.

THE SACRIFICE OF COL. M'CORMIK.

The Chicago Tribune's readers may rub their eyes a bit at seeing such words as advertisment, controler, fantom, hocky, indefinitly and prolog in its columns hereafter. However, the list of 24 words for which the Tribune has adopted simplified spelling is not particularly startling when compared with the changes that the Spelling Reform Association has been urging these many years. Where the Tribune outdoes all previous reform efforts is that its publisher has fallen in by altering the spelling of his name, and it appears as Col. Robert R. M'Cormik on the editorial page of the issue announcing the changes.

There have been some lusty battles for spelling reform, but this is the supreme sacrifice in that cause. President Theodore Roosevelt was a devotee, and sent his annual message to Congress in 1906 in that style of orthography, but never went so far as to sign himself Rosevelt. A famed philanthropist gave $250,000 to the movement, but did not alter his name to Karnegy. A leading American scholar defended the Roosevelt spelling policies of 28 years ago, but refrained from becoming Dr. Nikolas Mury Butler. The Standard Dictionary has long been presenting such words as tho and kist, but its publishers have not yet introduced themselves as Funk & Wagnals.

The Chicago publisher (nee McCormick) thus takes an action that should send his remodeled name echoing down through the history of spelling reform. Unwilling to submit to the gradual evolution by which English spelling has altered, he becomes the Columbus or Galileo or Marco Polo of the movement. M'Cormik, the liberator, may yet free us from the tryanny of Webster.

Mr. Filene compares Roosevelt to the quarterback of a football team. And there are times when the President looks like the center, too, and the guards, both tackles, both ends and the backfield.

THE GREAT CAVE-IN.

Why Cuba Hates the Platt Amendment

Provision in treaty giving this country right to intervene has been great handicap to Cuba, writer says; it has prevented people from achieving sound national life, and has aggravated Latin American suspicions of United States' motives; urges administration to prove its good neighbor policy by abrogating Platt amendment.

Mary Wilhelmine Williams, Professor of History, Goucher College, in the Baltimore Evening Sun.

WHEN I first visited Cuba, many years ago, I was surprised and pained by the attitude shown there toward the United States. To free the island from Spain's tyranny, our country had fought a war costing millions of dollars and thousands of lives. Yet, despite this American sacrifice of blood and gold, the Cubans regarded their beneficent neighbor, not with gratitude, but with resentment and hostility.

The cause was easily found. "Cuba libre" had never been fully achieved; freedom was limited by the Platt amendment, which had been forced upon the island as the price of nominal independence. The main provisions of this document, which was attached to the Cuban Constitution and made a "permanent" treaty between the countries, are:

Cuba engaged never to enter into any agreement with a foreign Power or Powers impairing her independence, and never to contract any financial obligation which could not be met by her ordinary revenues; she agreed to sell or lease to the United States lands for coaling or naval stations and to execute and extend the plans made for the sanitation of her cities, in the interest of preventing disease; she consented that the United States might "exercise the right to intervene for the preservation of Cuban independence, the maintenance of a government adequate for the protection of life, property and individual liberty."

The portions of the amendment regarding naval bases and intervention were especially offensive to the Cubans.

In September, 1906, came the first intervention under the Platt amendment, caused by threatened revolt over a "stolen" presidential election. After Estrada Palma, the victorious candidate, had three times appealed for aid, President Theodore Roosevelt acted. The result was the resignation of the Estrada Palma administration and the administration of Cuba for more than two years by an American, C. E. Magoon.

This was the most thorough interference in Cuban affairs that has taken place but repeatedly after it ended, American authorities intervened through diplomatic channels; and during the World War troops from the United States were sent to the eastern part of the island to prevent revolt against President Menocal, and remained several years.

After 1922, the American Government kept aloof from Cuba's internal troubles, until the intervention of 1933, perhaps chiefly because previous meddling had aroused much resentment in other parts of Latin America and had proved to be bad for American business there. And it seemed to be of no permanent aid to Cuba. Moreover, Article III of the Platt amendment had not obligated the American Government to intervene; it had merely given Cuban consent to such action, under certain conditions. Indeed, the Hoover administration frankly declared it would not take a hand in Cuban affairs unless American life and property were endangered.

Meanwhile, things went from bad to worse in Cuba. Graft and corruption were rampant, the press was muzzled much of the time and terrorist methods were employed against all who opposed governmental tyranny. Thousands fled into exile, chiefly to the United States; hundreds were shut away in ancient dungeons; and hundreds more were murdered in cold blood.

The public debt and the tax rate mounted rapidly, as did also the number of unemployed and of those who died from starvation. Many of the employed were cruelly exploited. In 1933, while the Cuban-American Sugar Co. was selling its product at more than 100 per cent above cost, it was paying laborers 20 cents for a 12-hour day.

American bankers were pouring loans into the island without much regard for Cuba's ability to meet payments on such debts. Presumably the clause about financial obligations in the permanent treaty did not apply when the creditors were Americans. Cuba seemed to exist, not for the Cubans, but for the benefit of American capitalists.

Then came Franklin D. Roosevelt with his avowed "good neighbor" foreign policy, and Sumner Welles was sent to Cuba on an errand of mediation, which failed because of Machado's bad faith. The subsequent bloody turmoil is well known. Through it all, the Platt amendment has been on the books.

What have been the results, negative and positive, of this generation-old treaty?

It has not saved the United States from an "intolerable situation" near its shores.

It has not protected the life, property and individual liberty of the Cubans—which it was unquestionably intended to do.

As a standing proof of "Yankee imperialism," it has increased general Latin American suspicion of the United States and helped prevent Pan-American solidarity and democracy.

It has created in Cuba a chronic hatred and fear of the United States.

It has encouraged American business interests to become the economic rulers of the island, reducing the laboring nationals to quasi-serfdom.

It has helped foster internal dissension and political retrogression, through being invoked as a refuge by desperate political "outs," and through being denounced as a bogy by shrewd political "ins."

It prevented the Cuban people, through fear of intervention, from uniting to rid themselves of the tyrannical Machado.

It has made possible a ban on education, the effects of which it will take many decades to wipe out. In no other Latin American country have the schools above grade rank ever been closed by official order for three years.

It has prevented Cuba from laying even the foundations of sound national life; for peoples, like individuals, must work out their own salvations, and before they can begin to do so, they must feel that their souls are their own. Under the Platt amendment, this has been impossible in Cuba.

The obvious next move for the Roosevelt administration, if its foreign policy be truly benevolent, is to abrogate the "permanent" treaty and set the Cuban people free. In the place of the hated amendment should come new agreements of mutual benefit which will help the islanders to rise to their feet economically. Such action will be the part of wisdom as well as of justice, and by it alone can we hope to regain the confidence and affection of Cuba.

Deflating the Kingfish

From the Minneapolis Tribune.

HUEY LONG may still be a kingfish to himself, but perhaps that is because he never saw the piscatorial mite they call a guppy. A guppy has more brass than a minnow, but is considerably smaller and more insignificant.

Mr. Long must know how one feels, because his candidate in the Democratic mayoralty primary in New Orleans has just taken a bad beating. For a gentleman who is once said to have boasted that he controlled the governments of three states, that is most discouraging. A self-styled political kingfish who can't name a Mayor would seem to demand reclassification by a committee of ichthyologists.

The Senator from Louisiana, certainly, is causing few ripples in the political aquarium these days. So far as the distribution of patronage is concerned, the Roosevelt administration apparently does not know that he exists. It seems totally unimpressed by his braggadocio and bluster. If the Senator is still a dictator, official Washington has either forgotten his status or has churlishly elected to ignore it.

Meanwhile, Mr. Long has been having more than his share of troubles on the home front. The investigation which a special Senate committee conducted into Louisiana politics did not result in the unseating of the Long protege, Mr. Overton, but neither did it leave the faint scent of attar of roses clinging to the Long machine. One gathered, on the contrary, that certain worthy Louisianians who had complained of gutter practices had something more to substantiate their case than a large imagination.

Now another Long protege, Mrs. Bolivar Kemp, is having her right to sit in the House contested, and the critics of the erstwhile Kingfish are hoping for the worst. (The House has declared the seat vacant. —Editor's note.)

The noisy and voluble Huey, in other words, is swimming in water that is uncomfortably warm. With no patronage influence at Washington, with contests and investigations challenging his once unquestioned supremacy, and with the home folks rising in revolt against him, he seems, at the moment, a most unkingly fish.

BONANZAS IN AVIATION.

From the Philadelphia Record.

BORNE aloft on the wings of Federal subsidies, the sky was the limit for certain aviation stocks, with the stratosphere a mere way station.

You read of the chap who turned $40 into $4,000,000 through this system. But he was a piker—and if you have any doubts, observe the testimony of Frederick B. Rentschler before the Senate investigating committee Rentschler testified that his $275 investment in aviation stock soared to $35,000,000. Nor was all of it paper profit. He sold enough of the stock to give him nearly $10,000,000 in actual cash, and the stock he has left today would bring $2,000,000 at current prices. He also received $431,544 in a year in salaries, bonuses and director's fees.

The interesting part of it all is how John Smith, taxpayer, helped foot the bill. United Aircraft & Transport, of whose board Rentschler is vice-chairman, has received $40,000,000 in postal subsidies.

It is also illuminating to learn that, during the past few weeks, members of Congress have been "deluged with offers of free airplane transportation"—by firms seeking or holding air mail contracts. Why not just "crack down" on this whole racket?

Firms which can pay such fat salaries, pyramid such huge stock profits and offer free junkets to Congressmen certainly aren't entitled to help from Uncle Sam.

The DAILY MERRY-GO-

By DREW PEARSON and

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.

THE Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, has come back from South America a new man. When he left he was fidgety and alarmed. Not long before he departed he even went to Roosevelt and asked to be relieved of his job as chief American delegate. Even on the boat en route to Montevideo he had the appearance of a man about to become a target for Latin bomb-throwers.

Several things changed all this.

One was his discovery that the Latin Americans didn't object to his taking the initiative. In fact, they liked it. They especially liked it when he started out by calling on them, instead of vice versa.

Another was his sincerity. Also his homely mountaineer philosophy. Hull's desire to co-operate, his idea that the United States was no better than the others, became so obvious that he disarmed his enemies. Instead of throwing bombs they threw bouquets.

Hull made a lot of little mistakes. He had an awful time pronouncing some of the Latin American names. The Chilean Foreign Minister he sometimes called "Mr. Chicago."

"Senor Cruchaga," corrected the punctilious Jimmy Dunn, State Department aide.

The Argentine Foreign Minister he referred to as "Mr. Savannah."

"You mean Senor Saavedra Lamas," suggested Mr. Dunn.

"Well, the Argentine," Mr. Hull concurred.

With this particular Argentine, the Secretary of State formed a fast friendship — even a partnership. Saavedra Lamas had been a thorn in the side of the United States for many months. He had written notes to the State Department that made Secretary Stimson squirm. He was considered the chief enemy of the Colossus of the North.

Cordell Hull singled him out from the first. He knew Saavedra Lamas had as his pet project —a non-aggression pact. He knew also that Secretary Stimson on March 3—last day of the Hoover regime—had sent a note to Argentina puncturing this pact. Finally Hull knew that Argentina had never ratified the Kellogg Pact and various other Pan American conciliation treaties.

So he unfolded to Saavedra Lamas a plan to have someone propose that all of these treaties—a total of five—be accepted by the Pan American Conference. And with his natural backwoods astuteness, Hull said:

"I want to get the number one man in the entire conference to make this proposal. If I can't get him, I want to find the number two man."

The Argentine Foreign Minister proposed the treaties.

Ham and Hen.

HAM KEAN, walrus-moustached Senator from New Jersey, has a farm in Union County in that State. Ham was born there, loves the place. On it he raises stock and poultry of which he is proud.

Some time ago, Ham was standing outside his house when a passing motorist swished by. One of his hens was standing by the roadside in a position somewhat analogous to that of her owner trying to make up his mind which way to vote on a Senate bill.

Just at the wrong time she made up her mind—and was killed.

"Hey, there!" yelled the Senator from New Jersey.

No reply but dust.

Mr. Kean however, is a better farmer than a Senator. Jumping into his own car, he pursued the fowl murderer, caught him, made him pay $2.65.

French Fascism.

REPORTS that State, War and Navy intelligence services send back from France are almost as disquieting as those from the Far East—perhaps more so.

The French General Staff is growing extremely restive. It sees Germany with almost as many airplanes as France. (On May 1, the two countries will be about even.) It sees Germany dominating the Saar, preventing a fair plebiscite. It sees Germany running the Free City of Danzig. And it can see no civilian French Government in a position to stop this.

That is why at the height of the Stavisky scandal there was a threat to form a dictatorship in France. The General Staff was merely using the scandal as a means to an end. And that is why probably sooner or later, the military will find some other excuse to dominate the government.

What will happen after that, no one can predict.

Another thing the General Staff has definite ideas about is some settlement of the American war debt. The Generals figure American good will is essential. They believe an offer should be made, even though it is not an offer for full payment. They would pay in goods, wine, even in Colonies. But at least they would offer to pay.

Of course the military in every country suffer from over-stimulated ambition, but of late they seem to be having their way surprisingly often.

Merry-Go-Round.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S partial restoration of veteran compensation cuts took the ground right out from under Senator Dave Reed. . . . The Pennsylvania Republican, facing an ominous re-election fight this year, had it all planned to wage his campaign as the veterans' great and devoted friend despite the fact that last year he was in the Hoover vanguard seeking reductions in veteran expenditures.

Mrs. Jimmy Dunn, daughter of the meat-packing Armours and wife of the State Department's protocol chief, came back from chaperoning Secretary Hull through South America with a rare acuna rug. They cost $200 in this country, she got it for $15. . . . The latest code problem of the NRA has been the manufacturers of brass rings for pigs' noses. According to NRA officials, there are only three employers of this industry and they employ the sum total of 12 men. They objected strenuously to being combined with any other code. . . . In the gold fish raising industry, only six employers could be located. They were finally told to go home, that they didn't need a code. . . . O. M. P. Brown of the Shipping Board, a relative of President Harding, and originally suspected of being political deadweight, has turned out to be one of the best lawyers on the board. . . . Ray Miller, hard-hitting AAA representative on the Federal Alcohol Control Administration, is harder for an Ambassador to see than the Secretary of State. Diplomats have been besieging him regarding their liquor quotas. . . .

How powerful is the steady behind-the-scenes pressure that Roosevelt is putting on Congress may be judged from the fact that with the session only a month old, four of the 10 major appropriation bills have already been put through the House. . . .

California's Representative John H. Hoeppel has voted against more administration measures than any other Democrat in the chamber. . . . Recently when he tried to get the floor a member yelled to him, "Wait until the Democrats get through, and then we'll listen to you!" He is known among his House colleagues as "Corporal Hoop-a-la" because of his raucous voice.

VINES DEFEATS TILDEN TO LEAD RIVAL BY THREE MATCHES

RECORD CLAIMED AFTER PRO STARS PLAY 44 GAMES IN SECOND SET

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 30.—Ellsworth Vines and Bill Tilden played one of the longest tennis sets of record in a four-hour match which ended after midnight today, with Vines the victor, 6—0, 21—23, 7—5, 3—6, 6—2.

Tennis fans here said the 44-game second set bettered the previous best marathon of big-time tennis by four games.

This was the eleventh match of a duel between the old master and the newest tennis pro. Vines has won seven.

Tilden, as most of the 5000 who paid $6000 to witness the exhibition, was worn out by the long exciting struggle. But not Vines.

The former world's amateur champion, playing in twice as good form as he displayed in his final amateur stand here last fall, had too much sting in his forehand drives and his service for the tired Tilden to handle.

Vines pounded across placement after placement in the dying set, which Big Bill's tired feet would not let him reach.

The match ended with Vines acing Tilden with a driving service, which the veteran protested as out, only to have Vines repeat the ace more convincingly after protracted argument.

One of the two sets Tilden won was the long drawn out second, after Vines had denied the veteran a game in the opening set.

Browns Release Hurler Braxton To Milwaukee

Announcement was made by the Browns today of the outright release of Pitcher Garland Braxton to the Milwaukee club of the American Association—the Browns' farm club.

Braxton served two brief terms with the Browns. The southpaw was recalled by the major leaguers in the late weeks of the 1933 season. Previously the southpaw served with the Boston Braves, the Washington Senators and the Chicago White Sox.

ST. LOUIS-OWNED DOG SHOWS GOOD FORM IN SOUTHERN FIELD TRIAL

SHUQULAK, Miss., Jan. 30.—Cold weather and extremely high winds interfered greatly with the Inaugural Derby of the New Southland Bird Dog Club which began near here yesterday. Twenty setters and pointers, the pick of this season's two-year-olds, are competing, but as yet it is anybody's race.

Several of the dogs made good showings, however, and among these the female pointer, Shot's Lady, owned by Grant Sturman of Mount Carmel, Ill., took the lead in bird finding. Norias Roy Jr., pointer owned by Jacob France of Baltimore, and Timbuctoo, a pointer owned by A. G. C. Sage of New York, also ran good races, each showing on game and running with good speed and range. Another very good heat was that of Egyptian Boots II, owned by Dr. C. D. Magee of St. Louis.

If the opportunity presents itself Gevecker will make a bid for the 1935 Olympic boxing tryouts for St. Louis, and Miss Boeckmann will make a bid for the national women's outdoor track meet.

TOP ROW, left to right—Elizabeth Reflow, St. Louis second in Missouri State women's singles; Frances Johnson, Minneapolis, second in Midwest women's singles; Bill Swallender, Minneapolis, first in Midwest men's singles; Katherine Durbrow, White Fish Bay, Wis., first in Midwest women's singles; Myra Azbe, St. Louis, first in Missouri State women's singles; Virginia Bucher, Kansas City, first in waltzing contest.

SECOND ROW—Arthur Preusch, Minneapolis, second in Midwest men's singles; Mrs. Arthur Preusch, second in Midwest pair skating; Mrs. Ruth English and Leonard Fogassey, St. Louis, first in Midwest and Missouri pair skating; Fogassey also first in waltzing contest with Miss Bucher; Bob Piros, St. Louis, second in Missouri State men's singles; Jean Schulte and Oliver Haupt Jr., St. Louis, second in Missouri pair skating; Haupt also first in Missouri men's singles.

LOCAL SKATERS SCORE A CLEAN SWEEP IN STATE CHAMPIONSHIPS

While skaters from Minneapolis and Milwaukee won the major honors in the Midwestern figure-skating championships, St. Louisans won several places in the Midwestern competition and made a clean sweep in the Missouri State championships, which were run concurrently with the other events at the Winter Garden yesterday morning and evening.

William Swallender of Minneapolis, national junior champion, won the Midwestern men's championship, with Arthur Preusch of Minneapolis, second, and 13-year-old Oliver Haupt Jr., of St. Louis, third.

The contestants had to "trace" a number of prescribed figures in the morning session, success being judged by how closely the contestant came to retracing the intricate patterns of the competition, 60 per cent of the rating for the championships being counted on the prescribed figures.

Free Style in Evening Contests.

In the evening, each contestant was allowed to select his own figures for display, and was allowed three and a half minutes for the fancy skating, which counted the remaining 40 per cent of the championship rating. The fancy skating was judged on the difficulty, variety and harmonious composition of the routine.

In the women's division, Katherine Durbrow of Milwaukee won first place honors from Frances Johnson of Minneapolis and Myra Jean Azbe of St. Louis, after close competition through both morning and evening.

All the Missouri State championships went to St. Louisans, out-of-town rivals not placing closer than third in any event.

Mis Myra Jean Azbe took first place in the women's division of the Missouri championships, with Elizabeth Ann Reflow, St. Louis, second.

Oliver Haupt Jr., who has been skating for only four years, won the Missouri men's title chiefly through an almost flawless performance in the fancy skating competition when he thrilled the crowd with his difficult series of jumps and spins. Robert Piros, St. Louis, won second place.

Fogassey Shares Three Victories.

The most popular performances of the evening were turned in by Leonard Fogassey and his partners in the pair and waltzing contests. Fogassey and Mrs. Ruth English easily took the midwestern and Missouri pair competitions with a beautifully synchronized performance of varied and difficult evolutions.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Preusch of Minneapolis, defending champions in the Midwestern pair competition, had to be content with second place after Fogassey and Mrs. English's performance, while Oliver Haupt Jr. paired with 12-year-old Jeanne Schulte to win third place for St. Louis.

Fogassey had not planned to enter the waltzing competition, but after Miss Virginia Bucher had failed to find a partner, they paired together, and without any previous practice, managed to easily waltz off with first honors.

Results:

EXTRA INNINGS by J. Roy Stockton

Street Said It First.

BRANCH RICKEY, general manager of the Cardinals' great organization, whose job it is to see that the manager of the St. Louis National League club has material with which to win, and to see that replacements are always available for fading stars, thinks that William Anthony Hallahan is the key man of the 1934 Redbird team.

"There has been much conversation about what the Cardinals can do if they find another hard-hitting outfielder, or if the punch is strengthened," Rickey said yesterday. "But I am perturbed not at all over the hitting question. We have the hitters. The averages prove that conclusively. And we have the defense. No; in my opinion it is not a question of hitting or fielding, but of pitching.

"I'd say that the greatest disappointment this club has suffered in many years was the way our pitching staff failed in 1933. We had the batting power and the defense. But the pitchers did not deliver. And I consider Hallahan the key man as we look forward to the 1934 campaign. If Bill will readjust his mental perspective of pitching—his pitching—and pitch as he did when he was helping the Cardinals to pennants in 1930 and 1931, our pennant prospects will be bright indeed.

They Call Him Wild Bill.

HALLAHAN, you know, is not a pitcher of the Alexander type, and yet that is the way he tried to perform last year. He tried to out-smart the batters, to place a ball where the hitter couldn't connect solidly. Hallahan is not that kind of a pitcher. He has speed and curves, but he never was rated even in his greatest years as a man with surpassing control. No; Hallahan, to win, must bear down, in the vernacular of the diamond. He must pitch hard. He doesn't have to have a smart catcher back there. All Hallahan needs, if he pitches as he can pitch, is a man behind the plate who knows what is coming and can catch a baseball. Anything that Hallahan throws is a good pitch, if he bears down. But in the last two years he tried to substitute cunning and brains for the product of his strong left arm, and his record should convince him that it would be wise to revert to his old style of Wild Bill Hallahan pitching. And if he does, it will mean much to the Cardinals of 1934.

"I'll go even farther than that. I'll say that if the pitching measures up to our batting and fielding strength, we'll give St. Louis another pennant in 1934."

The Giants' Spirit.

RICKEY believes the Giants will be as dangerous this year as they were last season, when they surprised the prognosticators by winning the league and world championships. He also thinks it will be an unusually close race, with several outstanding contenders.

"The Giants should be good for about two more years," he added. "And I don't use the age of the players as a yardstick. The mental perspective is all-important. The Giants worked with a common purpose, striving for the pennant without thought of salaries or good or bad treatment by the club. They saw the world series money as an objective worth fighting for and they fought. But time and the fortunes of baseball change the outlook. After a year or two of success and the banking of a little stake, players become money-conscious, they compare their lot with that of others. Team morale suffers.

"I'd say there are several clubs in the National League good enough to win the pennant, if all the players worked together with the world series spoils in their mind's eyes as a worthwhile objective."

Medwick Wants $10,000.

A NEW YORK newspaper quotes friends of Joe Medwick, the Cardinals' young outfielder, as expressing the belief that Joe will have serious contract difficulty with the Redbird office this season.

Joe, according to his friends, wants $10,000 for playing with the 1934 Cardinals, and if that is true, Joe is going to suffer the shock of his life. Medwick made good last year, there's no question about that, but the turnstiles didn't sing a song of $10,000 salaries and baseball, desiring to continue as a going concern, perforce must be governed by the music of those turnstiles. And they were pretty fair country blues singers during 1933, if you ask the red-ink boys. Despite Joe's good record of 1933, the Cardinals are not going to more than double the size of his pay check.

If business comes back, however, Joe will be in the big money before long. He can hit a baseball a long way and with more jack rabbit in the 1934 ball, he'll be among the leading sluggers and can be expected to "create many situations known as home-runs."

STILLMAN SIGNS TO BOX BIRKIE, GERMAN HEAVY, HERE ON FEB. 7

With Hans Birkie, German heavyweight of New York, and Al Stillman of St. Louis signed to meet in the 10-round feature of his show at the Coliseum, Feb. 7, Matchmaker Eddie Byrne of the Jackson Johnson Jr. post of the American Legion today turned his attention to the preliminaries. Byrne plans two other 10-round fights and a four-round opener.

The Birkie-Stillman match was closed yesterday when Stillman signed a contract which he and his manager, George Wilsman had persistently spurned for several days.

A native of Germany, Birkie has been campaigning in the United States for two years. Standing out on his notable record is a 10-round fight with the now champion, Primo Carnera. Carnera, according to accounts of that fight, won a very unpopular decision. A draw with Al Lasky, St. Paul star, and victories over Charlie Retzlaff, Walter Cobb and Isidore Castanaga were among his noteworthy achievements last year.

Trainer Draws Suspension From Miami Officials

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 30.—Suspension from Hialeah Park here of Nat Ray, racehorse trainer and former Canadian steeplechase rider, in connection with an investigation into alleged horse "doping" was announced yesterday by track stewards.

Three horses, which the stewards said Ray trains—Kiltamond, Heroson and Stealingaway—were ruled off the track, and the case was referred to the Florida State Racing Commission for further inquiry.

Following the first race of the opening day program at Hialeah Park last Thursday chemists reported Kiltamond had been "doped," stewards said.

Two other horse trainers and a woman already have been permanently barred from all Florida tracks by the commission in its efforts to stamp out the "doping" of horses.

They are Harry Cooper of Vancouver, B. C., Edward Haughton, well-known Kentucky trainer, and Catherine Treon.

Cooper posted a $1500 bond in Federal Court yesterday when he was arraigned on a charge of possessing narcotics and was released pending completion of a grand jury session called for next month. He already has made bond of $2500 in State court on a similar charge and has posted $500 with immigration authorities, although no charge has been made against him by the Federal division.

FOUR ST.

ELEVEN TO PLAY IN ROME TO BE SELECTED SOME TIME IN MARCH

By Herman Wecke.

Four St. Louis soccer players have been invited to try out for the United States eleven, which will compete in the world's championship tournament at Rome, next May and June, it was learned yesterday. The players are Billy Gonsalves, Bill Lehman and Willie McLean of the Stix, Baer & Fullers, and Larry Kickham of the Ben Millers.

The submission of names for tryouts must be in the hands of the Foreign Relations Committee of the United States Football Association not later than Feb. 15, and the players, who must be full citizens, must be available from the end of April to the end of June. Final tryouts for the team probably will be held in New York. It is planned to name the club not later than March 31, barring necessary changes at the last minute.

Members of the committee in charge of arrangements are Dr. G. Randolph Manning, chairman, and Andrew M. Brown and Joseph Triner.

Gonsalves on 1930 Eleven.

If Gonsalves the Man o' War of the Stix forward line, again gains a place on the United States team, it will be his second trip with a representative United States club. He made the trip to Montevideo for the tournament in 1930, along with Frank Vaughan and Raphael Tracy, two St. Louis players, now out of the game. The United States did not win in the South American competition, but the eleven made a fine showing.

McLean was a candidate for the team and, up to the last minute it appeared he had won a place. However, at a meeting of officials at the last minute it was decided that "he was too small." McLean in the Cup finals against the New York Americans last spring showed himself one of the finest wing forwards in the country, and he has continued his fine play this season.

Lehman and Kickham, the only St. Louis developed players, have never before been honored with invitations to try out for a team scheduled to participate against foreign clubs. Lehman is a fullback and Kickham, Gonsavles and McLean, forwards.

Advocate Benefit Matches.

According to a letter sent out by the Foreign Relations Committee response to the move to send the club has been very discouraging up to the present time. Few, if any, have given the U. S. F. A. any aid in completing details for the trip. In part the letter says:

"It is imperative that all affiliated organizations stage exhibition games for the benefit of our team's fund. In addition voluntary contributions should be sought from leagues and clubs, as well as individuals. A special badge will be given to all those who contribute from 50 cents to $5 to the fund."

According to the schedule mapped out by the Italian Football Federation, which is promoting the tourney, the United States team is scheduled to play the Central American championship, May 24, at Rome, with the victor to enter the competition against the European elevens.

Gould May Be Coach.

Davey Gould, assistant coach of the University of Pennsylvania eleven, will probably be named as trainer and coach of the United States team. Gould's selection has been recommended by Dr. Manning, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, and before selection must be approved by the National Commission of the U. S. F. A. Elmer Schroeder, president of the U. S. F. A., a Philadelphian, favors the naming of Gould for the important position, according to reports from the East.

Stix Continue Practice.

The Stix, Baer & Fullers, national champions, will continue practice today and Thursday for the second round national challenge cup match against the Sons of Malta eleven of Detroit at Sportsman's Park, next Sunday. Jimmy Nolan, out of the club's last game, because of an injury to his leg, will have had three weeks rest and will be in condition to oppose the Detroit aggregation. The remainder of the team's lineup will remain intact.

The Detroit team this season has practically the same battle front as the one which lost to the Andersons a year ago.

ZEIGLER TOTALS 730 TO LEAD IN MAJOR CIRCUIT

Ray Zeigler, who only recently became a member of the Hermanns, city champions and claimants to the world match-game bowling title, proved the individual star of last night's round of the Major City League on the Rogers Recreation drives, when he put across a total of 730, the result of games of 226, 248 and 256.

Zeigler's big count was the only 700 total in a round, which saw seven of the 12 teams go over the 3000 mark.

The Alexander & Sons five, winning three straight from the Wooster Lamberts, scored 3165 for the best team score. The quintet had games of 1007, 1039 and 1119. Scheer with 679 and Fechter 672 did the heavy work for the Alexanders. The Lamberts totaled 3031, with Roy Nelson showing the way with 680.

Aided by Zeigler's score, the Hermanns had 3135, falling to 959 in the last game, after rolling 1036 and 1140. The team won two out of three from the Budweisers, with a 3003 count. J. Wolken paced the losers with 673, which included a high game of 268.

The Charles Krons rolled 3087 to win two out of three from the St. Louis Dairies. Two new bowlers showed the way for the Krons, Schroeder totaling 627, while De Wees had 621. Rohrbach's 628 was high for the losers.

The Gus Krons counted 3030 to take three straight from the Cabannes, the last named team falling to 2777. Gromacki, 635, was the high man for the Krons. With the veteran Jerry Ameling rolling 257, 225 and 174 for a 656 total, the Jule Schmitts hit 3044 to win three straight from the Carondelets. McElheny had 628 for the losers.

The Silver Seals, paced by Ben Cohen, with 651, win the odd game from the Say It With Flowers. Tonkovic, 613, topped the losers.

City-Wide Entry for Church League Basketball Tourney, Sponsored by Post-Dispatch

By James M. Gould.

With at least a dozen organized leagues and many independent teams to draw from, the Greater St. Louis Church Basketball Tournament, sponsored by the Post-Dispatch, will see every section in the city and St. Louis County represented. There are to be three divisions in play—Men's Senior, Girls' Senior and Boys' Intermediate.

It is probable that all the teams of the men's leagues will enter, which would mean teams from the Downtown, South Side, North Side and West End divisions of the St. Louis Church League, from the North Side and South Side Sodality Leagues, from the North and South Side Walther Leagues, the Epworth and the Evangelical Leagues.

Girls' teams from the South Side Sodality and St. Louis Walther Leagues are counted upon and, in the Boys' Intermediate class, fives from three leagues—Junior Church, South Side Walther and Evangelical—have signified intention of competing for the awards.

Roy Newsom, tournament chairman, announced today that teams of organized leagues entering the Post-Dispatch play will not be scheduled for games on nights their league plays so there will be no conflicting dates. He also wishes to stress the importance of early entry and certification of teams with the entry, so there may be no delay in their acceptance. No entry fee of any kind is required.

Entry blanks have been appearing in the Sport Section of the Post-Dispatch since last Sunday and there are also printed blanks which may be obtained from Chairman Newsom upon application to him, care of the Sport Department.

No Age Limit Set.

Another important point is that no age limit has been imposed. The only requirements are that players shall have been, on Jan. 1, 1934, members of the congregations they are to represent and that said players' eligibility shall be certified to by the pastors of the various churches.

No netries in any class will be received after Feb. 7, as present plans call for the start of play on Feb. 12 with preliminary elimination games, to be played in the various church gyms in the different sections of the city preceding the semifinals on Feb. 21 and the finals the following day. Semi-final contests are scheduled at St. Louis U. and Washington U. gymnasiums, with the finals set for the Washington Field House.

With play in the various church leagues about half completed, the greater tourney offers teams which started poorly an excellent opportunity to show their real strength.

Competent referees will be provided and games will be played under boys' rules. This will make for uniformity of play in all divisions.

All information regarding the tournament may be obtained from Roy Newsom, tournament chairman. He may be addressed care of the Sport Department, St. Louis Post-Dispatch, or reached by telephone at CEntral 6400 or HIland 3584.

McManus Signed By Brooklyn Club

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—With the signing of Marty McManus, former player-manager of the Boston Red Sox, by the Brooklyn Dodgers yesterday came a revival of reports that Joe Stripp, Brooklyn third baseman, was to be traded to another club, notably the St. Louis Cardinals. Stripp and Manager Max Carey, it is understood, were not on speaking terms at the close of the last season.

Meantime, there have been reports from St. Louis that the Cardinals were seeking a third baseman with the idea of returning Pepper Martin to the outfield where he shone so brilliantly as the great star of the 1931 world series.

Brooklyn, meantime, is frankly in the market for a left hand pitcher and the Cardinals have three, Bill Hallahan, Jim Money and Bill Walker. It was considered unlikely, however, that they would consider a deal for Hallahan.

FOUR ST. LOUIS SOCCER STARS TO TRY OUT FOR U. S. TEAM

ELEVEN TO PLAY IN ROME TO BE SELECTED SOME TIME IN MARCH

By Herman Wecke.

Four St. Louis soccer players have been invited to try out for the United States eleven, which will compete in the world's championship tournament at Rome, next May and June, it was learned yesterday. The players are Billy Gonsalves, Bill Lehman and Willie McLean of the Stix, Baer & Fullers, and Larry Kickham of the Ben Millers.

The submission of names for tryouts must be in the hands of the Foreign Relations Committee of the United States Football Association not later than Feb. 15, and the players, who must be full citizens, must be available from the end of April to the end of June. Final tryouts for the team probably will be held in New York. It is planned to name the club not later than March 31, barring necessary changes at the last minute.

Members of the committee in charge of arrangements are Dr. G. Randolph Manning, chairman, and Andrew M. Brown and Joseph Triner.

Gonsalves on 1930 Eleven.

If Gonsalves the Man o' War of the Stix forward line, again gains a place on the United States team, it will be his second trip with a representative United States club. He made the trip to Montevideo for the tournament in 1930, along with Frank Vaughan and Raphael Tracy, two St. Louis players, now out of the game. The United States did not win in the South American competition, but the eleven made a fine showing.

McLean was a candidate for the team and, up to the last minute it appeared he had won a place. However, at a meeting of officials at the last minute it was decided that "he was too small." McLean in the Cup finals against the New York Americans last spring showed himself one of the finest wing forwards in the country, and he has continued his fine play this season.

Lehman and Kickham, the only St. Louis developed players, have never before been honored with invitations to try out for a team scheduled to participate against foreign clubs. Lehman is a fullback and Kickham, Gonsavles and McLean, forwards.

Advocate Benefit Matches.

According to a letter sent out by the Foreign Relations Committee response to the move to send the club has been very discouraging up to the present time. Few, if any, have given the U. S. F. A. any aid in completing details for the trip. In part the letter says:

"It is imperative that all affiliated organizations stage exhibition games for the benefit of our team's fund. In addition voluntary contributions should be sought from leagues and clubs, as well as individuals. A special badge will be given to all those who contribute from 50 cents to $5 to the fund."

According to the schedule mapped out by the Italian Football Federation, which is promoting the tourney, the United States team is scheduled to play the Central American championship, May 24, at Rome, with the victor to enter the competition against the European elevens.

Gould May Be Coach.

Davey Gould, assistant coach of the University of Pennsylvania eleven, will probably be named as trainer and coach of the United States team. Gould's selection has been recommended by Dr. Manning, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, and before selection must be approved by the National Commission of the U. S. F. A. Elmer Schroeder, president of the U. S. F. A., a Philadelphian, favors the naming of Gould for the important position, according to reports from the East.

Stix Continue Practice.

The Stix, Baer & Fullers, national champions, will continue practice today and Thursday for the second round national challenge cup match against the Sons of Malta eleven of Detroit at Sportsman's Park, next Sunday. Jimmy Nolan, out of the club's last game, because of an injury to his leg, will have had three weeks rest and will be in condition to oppose the Detroit aggregation. The remainder of the team's lineup will remain intact.

The Detroit team this season has practically the same battle front as the one which lost to the Andersons a year ago.

Governor's Son to Box for Yale

WRAY'S COLUMN

Let in Some Fresh Air.

JACK HURLEY, only three or four years ago just a young fight reporter on a Fargo, North Dakota, newspaper, with a fighter as a meal-ticket on the side, is today being strongly supported for the post of Madison Square Garden matchmaker.

HURLEY

We hope he goes over. The Garden will then be entitled to part its name in the middle with "square." That's also Hurley's middle name. It's our prediction that if Hurley gets this post the Madison Square Garden will lose all its present odium and gain, or regain, the prestige it enjoyed under Rickard.

You don't have to be told much about Hurley. His record tells you enough. Hurley, unknown except for the fact that he had a pretty good fighter, Billy Petrolle, went East. That's a hard place to crash, especially for a poor boy from the Dakota prairies.

Hurley not only crashed it without influence but within one year he had every newspaper in New York lined up behind him.

That's because, so they tell you, he always told the truth, never held out unreasonably for money, had fighters who gave the best they knew at all times, and could be counted on to go to the rescue of a friend.

Did He Make Good!

ONE of the shrewdest matchmakers in the business, his advice was sought by men who had been in the game for years. His opinions on all fight topics were respected and quoted.

Today he is looked upon as the manager the world has been waiting for—one who will give an even break and not seek an unfair advantage.

St. Louis had some business with Hurley. Had conditions been right here he would have remained as a promoter—at least for a time.

It was (for him, at least,) a lucky break that petty opposition here disgusted him with the setup and he pulled his freight.

With his "Fargo Express" he headed for New York, which has one virtue—it recognizes genius. It seems about to recognize Hurley, now.

Classifying Barney.

BILLY PETROLLE, iron fighter now retired from the ring, was twice defeated by lightweight champion Barney Ross. Still, Billy doesn't think the titleholder a great fighter! Hear him explain:

"No, I don't think Barney is a great fighter. I'd call him a good boxer. He isn't a hard hitter. He really did not hurt me once during our fights.

"Nor do I consider him a really GREAT boxer. Just a good one. He has something to learn yet. He is fast and my legs are slow, now. His left looked great because my boring-in style made it look that way. Against a clever boxer, who keeps out of his way and waits, he won't look so good."

However, Barney did not have to show his full repertoire against Petrolle. Petrolle's style just suited Barney. Had Petrolle changed tactics Ross would have shown some other trumps. He's quite a boxer. Perhaps he does lack a little experience. But what he has was good enough to take care of all opposition thus far, including that great scrapper, Tony Canzoneri.

Oral Betting Flops.

OPERATING simultaneously with mutuels, old style book making has proved a failure in New Orleans. Only a few days were needed to prove that it would not catch on at Fair Grounds. Much had been expected of the restoration of the slate, and General Manager Murphy was asked to make a statement. To a Post-Dispatch correspondent he said in part:

"When we decided to have oral betting in the clubhouse we were of the opinion that it would prove a popular move, and that if the experiment proved successful we might in another year turn the plant exclusively over to the oralizers.

"It has not worked out that way, however. Our statistics show that while we only charged 25 cents more admission to the clubhouse than to the grand stand, our ratio of people was at least 20 to 1 against the oral betting. This, in the face of the fact that New Orleans has always been regarded as a bookmakers' town.

"It might be that public opinion has undergone a great change. This much we are certain of—that the public is getting its thrill from racing with a great deal less per capita betting than in the old days, and that the mutuels seem to provide that thrill better than the books.

"The prices also, by comparison, are so uniform that the public seems to be properly protected with either system.

"I am of the opinion that, except possibly for New York, oral betting in this country is an obsolete system.

"As a consequence, sensing the sentiment of our public, we have gone back exclusively to co-operative betting, both in the clubhouse and the grand stand.

"The experiment has been interesting, but the public itself seems to have cast the final vote."

The Real Reason.

HOWEVER, the downfall of the booking experiment at Fair Grounds undoubtedly was due to the failure to establish it in the grand stand.

Three books opened for business in the clubhouse basement—an inconvenient arrangement. The vast majority of the attendants went into the grand stand. The test was not a real one since it was used in competition with the mutuels, with which bettors today are familiar.

With only bookies doing business, competition among bookies would give better prices especially for place and show, would afford an opportunity for "shopping" and would supply two bankrolls in place of one—the bookies' and the public's.

Bookmaking is doomed, both by law and by the fact that the mutuels produce a bigger and surer revenue for the race track promoters. When it comes right down to brass tacks, that's the real reason bookmaking of the old style is sure to fail.

Read This and Weep.

THE argument as to whether professional or college football is the better has lost some of its heat, with the new year, in this vicinity.

But it apparently is still raging on the coast. That's because the Chicago Bears are touring the Far West opposing all-star elevens made of 1933 and earlier college players. Thus far the Bears have polished off many gridirons with their collegiate opposition. But we had not realized how completely they had mopped up the neighborhood with Howard Jones and other famous Far West stars until we read the following comment by a Pacific Coast qualified observer, Frank Finch. He wrote to Alan Gould of the Associated Press:

"Twenty thousand fans who saw the Bears play Erny Pinckert's All-Stars will back me up when I say that the Bears would run a Southern California University eleven right out of the coliseum and into the next county.

"I never dreamed I would live to see the day when Aaron Rosenberg and Homer Griffith would look like Boy Scouts in football uniforms; but they certainly looked the part when compared to Cliff Battles, Ookie Miller, George Musso, Red Grange and Co.

"It's my belief that as result of the Bears' showing pro football will be well established on the coast by the fall of 1935. If that's a fair sample of what to expect, we Westerners can't see enough of them."

We take it that this ought to end the conversation as to what the Billikens could do to the Gunners, who tied the Bears, 0—0.

RENAISSANCE TO HAVE BEST TEAM IN ACTION HERE

The Renaissance basketball team, Negro world's champions, arrived here this morning, primed for their championship battle against the great Celtic team at the Coliseum tomorrow night.

The husky Negro athletes hopped out of their big touring coach after an all-night ride from Fort Wayne and immediately went to their hotel, where they announced that tomorrow afternoon, from 3:30 to 4:30 o'clock, they will hold an open basketball forum at the Pine Street Y. M. C. A., which will be attended by players, coaches and cage fans from Vashon and Sumner High and the Negro "Y" organization. Spectators will be admitted to the gallery free of charge.

In Great Condition.

The Rens, every man in the best of condition, were confident of winning their second straight world's title in tomorrow's encounter although they did not take the Celtics lightly. They have won 63 games and lost one this season.

Organized eight years ago, the team steadily forged to the front rank in basketball circles. For five years they met with rather indifferent success against the leading professional teams of the country but a study of their record against the Celtics in the last three years stamps them as the only team in America that can justly be rated on a par with Captain Joe Lapchick's outfit.

Two years ago the teams met in a four-game series and each won a pair. The Rens' ability to hold the Celts to a tie startled Eastern cage circles. And they continued their sensational record by winning the odd game of a five-game set last season.

Intent on regaining their laurels, the Celtics have booked a "breather" in Jonesboro, Ark., for tonight, following a strenuous week against five strong college and university teams. They will arrive here tomorrow morning.

Included in the Renaissance party were Manager Illidge, Captain Clarence "Fat" Jenkins, the highest salaried basketball player in the country; "Pappy" Ricks, "Eyre Bruiser" Saitch, William "Talleo" Smith, Charles "Tarzen" Cooper, Johhny Holt and Bill Yancey.

Smith and Cooper are each 6 feet 6 inches in height, and both will be used in an effort to stop the great Joe Lapchick, according to Captain Jenkins. Saitch is former Negro national singles tennis champion.

Banks to Start.

The Celtics, who will be joined here by their owner, Max Rosenblum of Cleveland, report that every man is in tip-top shape and point to the loss of last year's title through the absence of Davey Banks, said to be the fastest man in the game. Banks will be at one of the starting forward positions in the title contest here.

George Sisler, promoter of the game, said that there are several hundred select floor seats still available and also stated that 3000 gallery tickets, at 40 cents each, would be put on sale at the Coliseum at 7 o'clock tomorrow night. Sisler will speak on Radio Station KWK at 9 o'clock tonight.

Seeks Basketball Games.

FRANK MONTFORT BOWLS 300-GAME AT VESCOVOS

Frank L. Montfort, a member of the Vescovo team in the County Scratch League, scored a perfect game of tenpins at the Vescovo Recreation yesterday. Montfort was bowling in a special doubles match with Ted Gillett against A. Norbett and George Pohle. In the three-game total Montfort had 806 on games of 300, 247 and 259.

Montfort will be awarded a medal by Emil Vescovo, manager of the alleys, as a result of his achievement.

Handball Semifinals.

The semifinal round in the Y. M. H. A. handball tournament will be played tonight at the Y. M. H. A. In Class A, Bill Littman will meet Morris Wexler and Lou Coffin will oppose Irwin Gollub.

"Big, Bad Bob" Hughes, of Tulsa Oilers, Quiet Off Ice, Is Real Terror in Game

Has Spent More Time in the Penalty Box Than Any Other Player in League.

Regarded as Roughest Player in Circuit but Shows He Can 'Take It,' Too.

By W. J. McGoogan

Big Bad Bob Hughes, Tulsa Hockey Club defense man, isn't such a bad fellow, after all, despite the fact that he has spent more time in the penalty box this season than any other player in the American Association, and is rated the roughest, toughest player south of the Canadian border and, of course, west of Boston.

Certainly Bob is the most talked of man in the league, and some of the talk about him among players and fans might be called profane. He hit Al Hughes, coach of the Flyers, on the head with a hockey stick and inflicted a cut which required five stitches to close, for which Bob was fined $100. He has been in one scrape after another this season, but he stays in there, dealing it out and taking it.

Off the Ice.

But off the ice he is a rather nice appearing young man, 28 years old, quiet spoken. Not at all the blustering type you might expect after seeing him break up opposition plays with some of the 184 pounds which he carries on his frame of 5 feet 11½ inches.

Hughes' home is Toronto, Ontario, Canada, where he lives with his wife and child, a boy, not yet a year old. He attended high school for three years then went to work for the Canadian National Railway, playing amateur hockey in his free time.

It was not until three years ago that he turned professional, and then was forced into the game when he lost his job through the depression. And he plans to get out of the professional game as soon as he can get a steady job which will enable him to stay at home.

These facts about himself he told while draped over a chair in his hotel room here recently.

He played with the Springfield, Mass., club of the Canadian-American League for one season, but stayed home last season, driving a truck for the Anaconda Brass Co. He then joined the Tulsa team at the start of this season.

Bob came up through the hard school of Canadian amateur hockey and still believes those boys play the most attractive game.

"You ought to see a junior championship contest," he said, "with those kids in there with their hearts and souls in the game. How they give and take! These professional contests are fast and exciting but they are tame compared to the amateurs.

"Most all of us in the professional leagues played through that kind of hockey.

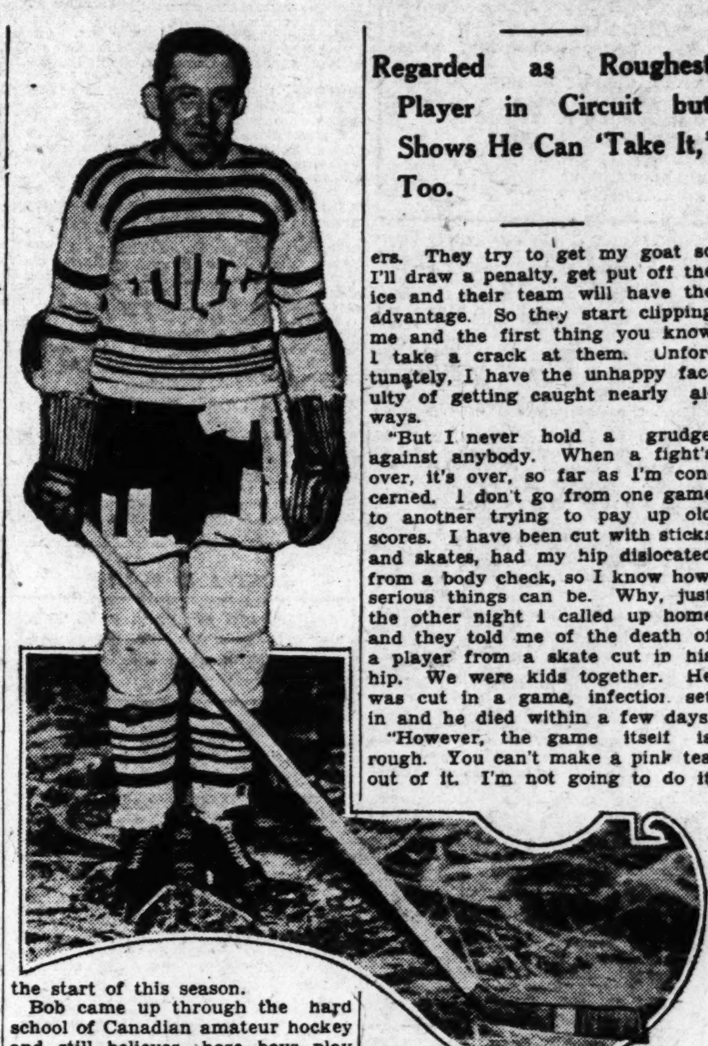

Trouble With Temper.

"Getting back to my trouble, perhaps I have never learned to control my temper as I should. I know it and so do the other players. They try to get my goat so I'll draw a penalty, get put off the ice and their team will have the advantage. So they start clipping me and the first thing you know I take a crack at them. Unfortunately, I have the unhappy faculty of getting caught nearly always.

"But I never hold a grudge against anybody. When a fight's over, it's over, so far as I'm concerned. I don't go from one game to another trying to pay up old scores. I have been cut with sticks and skates, had my hip dislocated from a body check, so I know how serious things can be. Why, just the other night I called up home and they told me of the death of a player from a skate cut in his hip. We were kids together. He was cut in a game, infection set in and he died within a few days.

"However, the game itself is rough. You can't make a pink tea out of it. I'm not going to do it now. I'll go out and play the same as I always have, yes, in St. Louis, too. The fine was pretty stiff but I'll pay it in installments and maybe it will be a lesson to all of us."

Other players complain that Hughes plays altogether too rough; they say he makes it tough on them and on himself the way he wades into an opposing forward, but they all agree that outside of that, he's all right. And how he does get the publicity for the Oilers!

GOLFERS BEGIN PRACTICE FOR AGUA TOURNEY

By the Associated Press.

AGUA CALIENTE, Mex., Jan. 30.—Golf's conquistadors had crossed the border into Tia Juana Valley today to get the feel of the Agua Caliente course before they start shooting for the richest purse of the Western tournament season.

In the half-dozen previous championships, a number of the nation's best golfers have failed to annex any appreciable share of the $20,000 prize money.

Stars in Form.

It appeared, however, that this group, including Denny Shute, British open champion; Ralph Guldahl, runner-up to the national open title; Willie Goggin, finalist in the national P. G. A. tournament, and Craig Wood, leading money winner of 1932, was at last rounding into top form.

But so was the group of young players which has been causing the champions and near champions of other years so much trouble.

Shute, whose wood-shot timing has been off, has collected less than $500. Wood, winner of $4000 in prize money and three of the West Coast titles last winter, has received slightly more than $200. Guldahl's share to date has been less than $100, while Goggin's cut amounts to $540.

MacDonald Smith and Tom Creavy stand out pretty much alone among the seasoned campaigners who have collected in the gold parade. Smith's earnings approximate $2150 to head the list, with Paul Runyan and Creavy gathering in approximately half that much.

The tournament starts tomorrow with an 18-hole round and will close Saturday. A Scotch foursome tournament staged by the Divot Diggers, motion picture colony golfing group, will follow Sunday with an invited group of outstanding pros playing with the Divot Digger members.

Flyers to Meet Oklahoma City Sextet Tonight

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 30.—With second place in the American Hockey Association standing at stake, the St. Louis Flyers oppose the Oklahoma City Warriors here tonight.

The St. Louis team arrived here without one of its stars, Center Rollie Huard, who sprained his wrist in the game against Tulsa at St. Louis Sunday night. Coach Hughes will alternate Shrimp McPherson and Joie Thorsteinson at the center position.

St. Louis has played three games here this season, winning the first, 3-2; and losing, 1-2 and 1-3. The Warriors have lost two of the three games played at St. Louis, so that the teams are evenly divided in six contests.

Weight Forces Hank Mills to Give Up Riding

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 30.

WEIGHT, the bugaboo of all jockeys, has forced "Hank" Mills to hang up his riding tack. Growing fast and unable to combat the laws of nature, Mills decided today to retire as a jockey. He tipped the beam at 119½ pounds in spite of every effort to reduce. Two years ago, when he startled the racing world with his brilliant riding, "Hank" weighed less than 100 pounds. He is big of bone and has not yet attained his full maturity. Jim Clark, agent for Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons, for whom Mills rode, says Hank will spread out considerably and may weigh 145 pounds this time next year. The youngster, who joined the ranks of the benedicts last fall, will return to his home in Montrose, Colo., where he intends to "rassle cattle on my ranch." He owns several ranches.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—Led by the rails and industrials, stocks advanced at a fast pace today, following final congressional action on the President's gold bill. Many industrials broke through their 1933 highs before easing under profit taking. Gains of 1 to more than 2 points predominated. The turnover approximated 4,300,000 shares, the largest aggregate since last July. The close was firm.

One of the most inclusive price averages for industrial shares, the Standard Statistics Co. average of 50 issues, touched 101.9 at 1 p. m., or almost up to the 102.1 peak of July. Industrials sagged later, however. In this average, 1926 equals 100. The close was 101.8. The Standard Statistics average for 20 rails closed at 51.6, which was well under the 58.0 level of last July. The average of 20 utilities closed 78.7, was farthest from its 1933 top, which was 113.7.

Day's 10 Most Active Stocks.

Closing price and net change of the 10 most active stocks: Curtiss-Wright, 5⅛, up ½; Sperry Corp., 9⅜, up ½; Consol. Oil, 12⅝, up ¾; Chrysler, 57, up 1; Coml. Solvents, 36½, up 1⅛; Gen. Motors, 40¼, up ¼; United Airc., 36¼, up 1⅛; Nat. Distill, 27⅝, up 1; N. Y. Central, 40⅜, up 1¾; Socony-Vac., 18⅝, up ⅜.

While inflationary psychology may have had something to do with the spurt in equities, grains, cotton and other commodities generally failed to join in the demonstration. Most finished barely steady. The dollar also did little in foreign exchange dealings. Bonds were active and higher. Increased demand for stocks put the ticker tape seven minutes behind floor transactions at one time.

Optimistic chartists were impressed by the pickup in the carriers which have been behind some of the other groups. Union Pacific got up more than 4, while Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Southern Pacific, Delaware & Hudson and Lackawanna moved up 2 or more each. Allied Chemical, International Silver, Douglas Aircraft, U. S. Smelting, Chrysler, Case, U. S. Pipe & Foundry and a number of others stepped forward 1 to around 2. American Telephone, U. S. Steel, General Motors, American Can and some of the so-called leaders ended about even.

Wheat was nervous at the close with prices at the same as yesterday's finish to ⅜ of a cent a bushel higher. Cotton eased 10 to 25 cents a bale. Bar silver was up ⅜ of a cent an ounce at 44⅜ cents.

The British pound, at mid-afternoon, was down ⅜ of a cent at $5.01½. French francs firmed .02 of a cent at 6.31 cents and Dutch guilders improved .20 of a cent at 64.55 cents. Belgian belgas and Swiss Francs were .06 and .07 of a cent higher, respectively. Canadian dollars eased 1-16 of a cent at 99.31¼ cents.

An expansion of public participation in equity trading was reported by several commission firms while, at the same time, several professional operators were said to have lightened their commitments on the theory that some of the more active issues have advanced too rapidly.

Bank and Trade Summaries.

The Federal Reserve Board's condition statement as of Jan. 24, showed a further return of currency to the banks. Net demand deposits increased $44,000,000, time deposits were up $20,000,000 and there was a gain of $73,000,000 in Reserve balances with Federal Reserve banks. Loans and investments were off $51,000,000 and Government deposits were down $93,000,000. Loans on securities were up $12,000,000, but "all other" loans declined $19,000,000.

UNCHANGED TO HIGHER CLOSE TO WHEAT

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—Profit-taking after four successive days of advancing prices led to late setbacks of the wheat market today, temporarily wiping out early new gains. Rallies, however, ensued at the finish.

The late transient reaction in wheat was in the face of reports of dust storm today in Western Kansas. Forecasts indicated rising temperatures for the entire domestic grain belt, but no moisture was regarded as likely in the Southwest.

Wheat closed nervous, at the same as yesterday's finish to ⅜c higher, corn unchanged to ¼c lower, oats unchanged to ⅛c up, and provisions at 7c to 12c advance.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—Profit-taking after four successive days of advancing prices led to late setbacks of the wheat market today, temporarily wiping out early new gains. Rallies, however, ensued at the finish.

The late transient reaction in wheat was in the face of reports of dust storm today in Western Kansas. Forecasts indicated rising temperatures for the entire domestic grain belt, but no moisture was regarded as likely in the Southwest.

Wheat closed nervous, at the same as yesterday's finish to ⅜c higher, corn unchanged to ¼c lower, oats unchanged to ⅛c up, and provisions at 7c to 12c advance.

U. S. STEEL VOTES 50C ON PREFERRED

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—Directors of the United States Steel Corporation today declared a dividend of 50 cents a share on the preferred stock. A similar amount was paid in each quarter since January last year when the rate was reduced from $1.75 quarterly.

The corporation reported total earnings of $5,537,084 for the final quarter of 1933, after ordinary operating expenses, compared with $11,816,832 for the third quarter and deficit of $3,828,272 for the December quarter in 1932.

After interest; depreciation, depletion, overhead expenses on iron ore, etc., deficit for the quarter was $7,945,445, compared with deficits of $2,717,014 in the September quarter and $16,729,368 in the December quarter in 1932.

After provision for the preferred dividend, the total deduction from surplus for the December quarter was $9,746,850 compared with $4,518,419 for the three months ended Sept. 30 and $18,530,773 for the final quarter of 1932.

The dividend on the preferred shares is payable Feb. 27 to stock of record Feb. 1.

A statement issued by the company said that for the year 1933 "net deficit in income account after all charges but before dividends was $36,519,000 against $71,176,000 in the preceding year."

Dividends totaling $7,205,622 weer paid on the preferred stock, which with the operating deficit made an aggregate deficit for the year of $43,742,900. This compared with total 1932 deficit of $90,186,557.

hope to return to the jobs they once had. It has been estimated that there are at least 1,000,000 people in this situation.

"We have large numbers of families getting relief whose economic future is so discouraging that it seems entirely improbable that they will ever be accommodated again in industry," Hopkins said. "They are in communities where industry has been worked out such as in the steel centers to some extent, copper and in some farming country where land is so poor that no one could make a living on it.

Some on Poor Land.

"As to sub-marginal lands in contra-distinction to timber land we find families living on such lands and the Government cannot simply go in and purchase their land and have these families just move on. The plan is not only for those in centers where industry cannot help them, but for those on sub-marginal land who are in the same kind of economic stagnation.

"This plan gets into the Government's long range program and into some of the first steps which are necessary to work out that program. We are going to try to take those first steps in the interests of the needy people involved and in the interests of national economy."

"What will those people do when they are taken somewhere?" Hopkins was asked.

"They may do two or three things," he replied. "They may work part of the time inside the national forests. Large numbers of men are required for rehabilitation and replanning of national forests in addition to the Civilian Conservation Corps."

Situation in Detroit.

"Does the plan take in people in Detroit who have lost out?" was another question.

"Yes. Detroit is one of the towns we are thinking about. A lot of people moved into Detroit in the boom times and now there is no work for them and some people have been wondering if they are ever going back to work.

"I think it is time for the Government to explore such a situation in addition to giving relief. If the Government is going to spend large sums of money a substantial portion should be spent in constructive enterprises such as this."

Asked where the people could go besides to the forests, Hopkins replied that they could be put "into smaller communities where industries are moving."

"Small industries may be developed around agricultural communities."

May Teach Handicrafts.

Hopkins said they might also be taught handicrafts and that there were a great many families now on submarginal land in national forests that could be moved to the edges of the forests and given work in them.

"What inducements would be held out to these people?" Hopkins was asked.

"Their economic life," he said, "is such now that you would not have to hold out much. We would transport them and possibly underwrite them for a while. In fact, we might not have to give them any more than we are now giving them for relief."

Hopkins said that the whole situation will be studied in an effort to find an intelligent way to do the job, adding, "we want to get these people into small self-sustaining communities."

THREE CASES OF SMALLPOX 600 PERSONS VACCINATED

Health Commissioner Issues Warnings, Points Out 25 Per Cent Are Unprotected from Disease.

Three cases of smallpox in St. Louis, one arising in a factory and another in an apartment house, have caused the immediate vaccination of 600 persons who had been exposed and issuance of a warning today by Health Commissioner Bredeck that vaccination is the only preventive of this once most dreaded of all diseases. None of the three patients had ever been vaccinated.

"St. Louis has had outstanding protection against smallpox since about 1901 under the admirable vaccination record of Dr. Max Starkloff," he said, referring to his veteran predecessor in office. "But probably 25 per cent of the people in St. Louis have never been vaccinated, and in that 25 per cent we have the possibility of a serious epidemic if the disease should ever get a start here.

"We believe we have vaccinated every person who had been exposed to any of the three cases. When 85 'contacts' in an apartment house were vaccinated Sunday, 10 were found never previously to have been vaccinated. When 550 were vaccinated in the factory, we found that 99 had not been vaccinated before.

"It is important to know that one cannot depend on protection from an old vaccination. It confers immunity for about seven years. After that time, revaccination is advisable whenever there is possibility of exposure."

HYMNS LEAD TO CONFESSION

BLYTHEVILLE, Ark., Jan. 30.—After hearing hymns during religious services at the county jail here, Walter Lamberd, 42 years old, held on a minor charge, confessed he was wanted for murder at Anniston, Ala., Sheriff Wilson said today. The Sheriff quoted Lambert as saying he wanted to be returned to Alabama and "get it over with."

Alabama deputies will take Lambert back to answer charges of murder. Sheriff Wilson said Lambert confessed killing a man named Preyton Bone to avenge an attack on his brother, Ross Lambert, who later was killed in a fall from a freight train in Montana. Lambert's confession came after a minister implored the prisoners to embrace religion and several old hymns were sung.

SENATE GROUP APPROVES NAVY BILL, HOUSE TO ACT

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The Vinson-Trammell bill authorizing construction of the Navy up to full treaty strength was approved today by the Senate Naval Committee as the House prepared to pass it.

The committee approved the bill without a record vote after a short hearing in which Admiral William H. Stanley estimated the cost of the program at about $475,000,000.

Representatives of several peace organizations protested the legislation as a "terrific threat" to the 1935 naval conference and contended its only purpose was to provide contracts for shipbuilding companies.

On the recommendation of the Navy the committee modified the bill to give President Roosevelt broad power to purchase naval aircraft "in numbers commensurate with a treaty navy" instead of the original provisions for a specific limitation of 2184 planes.

MILLS WARNS AGAINST 'REGIMENTED ECONOMY' AS PERMANENT FIXTURE

Mills criticised payment of PWA and CWA wages higher than the prevailing rate in private industry.

The crux of the problem of recovery, he said, was whether the benefits of Government stimulation of production or consumption of goods would spread to the production of durable goods. The majority of unemployed today, he asserted, is composed of those who customarily earn their living in the heavy industries.

Monetary Policy.

"The Government would enormously enhance the prospect of early recovery if it would remove the uncertainties that at present deter the business man from making long-term commitments and the investor from tying up his funds in long-time obligations," the former Treasury head asserted. "The chief of these are the uncertainty as to the Government's monetary policy, and now the pre-empting of the money market by the Federal Government.

"I am not one of those who believe it was either necessary or desirable to abandon the gold standard. I look with dismay upon the repudiation of its obligations by the Government of the United States. I have no faith in monetary manipulation as a wholesome means of raising prices. But I am enough of a realist to face accomplished facts and not to indulge in futile recriminations. The question is not the rightness or wrongness of past policies, but, given existing circumstances, what is a sound future policy?

"Uncertainty as to the ultimate value of the dollar destroys confidence, hinders business decisions, commitments and activity, inhibits credit expansion and brings about a condition of stagnation in the capital market, for no investor cares to advance funds in complete ignorance of the value of the unit with which he will be repaid.

"Almost anything is better than this uncertainty. This is all the more true in view of a budget now apparently beyond control and a deficit of such proportions as in itself to constitute a threat to the integrity of our currency.

"The President's recent message, while in some respects reassuring, raises new doubts and fears. Those of us who had hoped for a definitive devaluation of the dollar and a stabilization of its exchange value, are again disappointed. We are still confronted with all of the uncertainties of a managed currency. It is only too evident that we have not reached a terminal in this long journey through the mazes of monetary experimentation, but only a way station. There is still much to come.

"In this message, nowhere do we find a definite commitment as to the ultimate value of the dollar. On the contrary, the President speaks of a gold dollar "of such weight and fineness as may be established from time to time.'

On a Paper Basis.

"Moreover, since even when the plan goes into effect, gold is only to be paid out at the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury, we are in effect to remain on an inconvertible paper basis, though ostensibly on a gold bullion basis.

"The Government is to take over all the gold at present held by the central banks, in accordance with, and as the President explains it, 'the inherent right of Government to issue currency and to be the sole custodian and owner of the base or reserve of precious metals underlying that currency.' He adds: 'With this goes the prerogative of Government to determine from time to time the extent and nature of the metallic reserve.'

"In the absence of definite explanation, if this means anything, it means that there is an ultimate intent to have the Treasury issue currency, the free gold obtained to serve as a reserve against such a currency issue. Otherwise, why take over all the gold? Why not just that portion representing profit resulting from devaluation? Assuming that the free gold amounts to some four billion dollars, and that the Administration might determine that a 25 per cent reserve is adequate, 16 billion of currency could be issued. It is difficult to escape the suspicion that the administration has some such thought in mind as a means of financing the immense deficits that it is incurring. Since the currency so issued would not be in response to the demands of business and commerce, but to meet current Government expenditures, it would mean inflation of the crudest kind, disguised by a thin coating of gilt and silver.

"But this is not the whole story. One of the most admirable features of our Federal Reserve System, the establishment of which constitutes one of the great constructive achievements of the Wilson administration, was the provision for an elastic currency, expanding and contracting in accordance with the business and commercial needs of the country, as contrasted with the rigid and inelastic monetary system of the past; and the placing of the control of the volume of money and credit in the hands of central banks operated under Government supervision, but free from political control. The program outlined in the President's message clearly contemplates the impairment of these two central features of a sound monetary system. For an elastic currency, he would substitute a redundant and inelastic currency. For the non-political control of the central banks, he would substitute the political control of the Treasury. Such a prospect is hardly reassuring.

Relief for Agriculture.

Turning to the farm problem, Mills said:

"The facts speak for themselves. It is clear that we must produce less and we must sell more.

"I am not inclined, therefore, to be too critical of the administration's program, as strictly emergency measures. Conditions may well have justified both bonus payments and the debt relief program. But, looking to the future, I have no confidence that premium payment will reduce production, and I am sure that a billion dollar processing tax will curtail consumption. Even today the Government reports indicate that the reduction in winter wheat acreage is disappointing. On the other hand, the production of flour for domestic consumption during the four months July to November showed a falling-off of over 11 per cent.

"Nor am I ready to accept the intolerable hardships involved in adjusting agricultural production to the needs of the domestic market. A practically completely self-contained and controlled national economy can doubtless be attained, but only at a frightful social cost, and by the enforced migration of millions of people from their homes and an all-round lowering of the standard of living.

"I prefer to turn my attention to the possibilities, among others, of recovering lost markets and to the stimulation of increased consumption not only through the restoration of purchasing power at home but through the promotion of a greater prosperity and a higher standard of living the world over.

"Granted that the difficulties are enormous, and that much time and patience will be required, this is even more true of the self-containment program. We will have to abandon the present policy of isolation and intense nationalism and to some extent modify recent tariff practices. This may sound strange coming from an orthodox Republican, but I have never understood that a sound system of production, based on the difference of the cost of production at home and abroad, if intelligently applied, means the erection of impassable tariff barriers, the destruction of our commerce with the rest of the world, and the sacrifice of the efficient farmer to save the inefficient manufacturer."

REPORTS WORK OF BOY SCOUTS HAS INCREASED IN DEPRESSION

Walter W. Head, National Council President, Speaks at Annual St. Louis Meeting.

Walter W. Head, president of the National Council of Boy Scouts, told the annual meeting of the St. Louis council last night at Hotel Chase that the work of the scouts had increased during the depression. He said the national council gained 27,000 members in 1933.

Streamers were presented to 97 troops, sea scout ships and cub packs by Mayor Dickmann for qualifying for the 1933 President's Achievement Award. Head was presented with a 15-year veteran's pin and was made a member of the executive board. Other new members of the board are Paul Bakewell Jr., Richard Baldwin, Willard R. Cox, George L. Gamp, Ethan A. H. Shepley and Dr. R. S. Vitt.

E. D. Nims was re-elected president. Other officers are Col. H. D. McBride, commissioner; A. O. Wilson, treasurer; Nelson Cunliff, chairman of the court of honor; Clarence H. Howard Jr., secretary; Carl H. Holekamp, Gale F. Johnston and David P. Wohl, vice-presidents. The meeting was attended by 750 scoutmasters, troop committeemen, field commissioners and their assistants.

Robinson Says Mills' Speech Indicates He Is Candidate.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Senator Robinson, the Democratic leader, said in a formal statement today the Topeka address of Ogden Mills, Hoover Secretary of the Treasury, was "notable in that it indicates his candidacy for the presidential nomination on the Republican ticket and the platform upon which he expects to run."

While condemning Administration proposals, Robinson said Mills made only "one constructive proposal"—tariff reform—and in doing so repudiated the principles for which Mills had stood "throughout a long political career."

Representative Byrns of Tennessee, House Democratic leader, said: "It is rather pleasing that Mr. Mills now concurs with the policy of the Democratic party as far as developing foreign markets for our surplus products.

"While Mr. Mills was a member of the House, and a leader in the last Republican administration as Cabinet member, he took the contrary view. The policy of the Republican party was to raise tariff so high that our foreign markets were destroyed to a large extent. I understand Mr. Mills thinks the NRA is a good thing."

Missouri Drainage Loans by RFC.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.— Two loans for the purpose of refinancing drainage districts in Missouri were announced today by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Seventeen thousand dollars goes to the Little River district, at Princeton, and $87,500 to the Union Township district, at La Grange. The loans are at 4 per cent. Altogether the RFC has now advanced more than $25,000,000 to drainage, irrigation and levee districts throughout the country.

Sound Speed Measured.

Earthquakes, Floods.

The People's Voice.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE.

SCIENTIFIC measurement by Prof. Dayton C. Miller, who teaches physics, show that sound travels EXACTLY 1087.13 feet per second. That is of slight importance compared with the speed of light, which measures all distances in the universe. But to know the exact speed of sound is highly important in war.

Hereafter, calculation will establish the exact distance and facilitate locating and blowing up enemy cannon as soon as the sound is heard.

Big guns at Sandy Hook, N. J., helped determine the speed of sound. Those super pop-guns will never again be useful in any other way, for no nation will ever be idiotic enough to attack this country except through the air, or by submarine.

Prof. Bellaschi, Westinghouse research engineer, tells the American Institute of Electrical Engineers that science, which can make "artificial lighting" is now able to reproduce the shattering force of the lightning, as well as its light effect. This is done by adding 150,000 amperes to the artificial bolt.

The ancients believed that Jove hurled his thunder-bolts at those whom he disliked, hence the lightning and thunder. Scientific man may actually do it. That would make future war even more unpleasant. The airplane is fast enough in destruction, but electricity goes around the world seven times in a second. If a man in Tokio could launch a thunderbolt and hit Moscow, Paris or Berlin a tenth of a second later, that would be real war, and world peace would become necessary.

Dr. Conant, brilliant young president of Harvard University, says to encourage university men: "The success or failure of the civilization we are building in America today depends on the new recruits enlisted by the universities to carry on this never-ending adventure."

Dr. Conant would tell boys that can't go to a university that, while much depends on the small group of thoroughly educated men, who are a small minority of those that graduate from universities, by the way, infinitely more depends on the millions that do not go to universities. Those millions will produce in the future, as they have done in the past, such men as Abraham Lincoln and Thomas A. Edison.

What your long ancestry has put into your head and character before you were born is more important than anything that any university can add.

No distilled liquors will be served in the White House at any time, as they are not necessary in connection with White House entertainment. Wines will be served, but only "simple" wines, not expensive, and, preferably, American wines. That seems to be a good American wine program.

Interesting to those that study social problems is Mrs. Mary Kelly, 77 years old, mother of 19 children, asking for a divorce for cruelty from her husband, 78 years old.

Of the 19 children, only two are left alive. That should interest those that denounce birth control. It might have been as well for Mrs. Kelly to have had four, five, six or seven children, and have them all live, rather than 19 and lose 17.

Robinson Says Mills' Speech Indicates He Is Candidate.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Senator Robinson, the Democratic leader, said in a formal statement today the Topeka address of Ogden Mills, Hoover Secretary of the Treasury, was "notable in that it indicates his candidacy for the presidential nomination on the Republican ticket and the platform upon which he expects to run."

While condemning Administration proposals, Robinson said Mills made only "one constructive proposal"—tariff reform—and in doing so repudiated the principles for which Mills had stood "throughout a long political career."

Representative Byrns of Tennessee, House Democratic leader, said: "It is rather pleasing that Mr. Mills now concurs with the policy of the Democratic party as far as developing foreign markets for our surplus products.

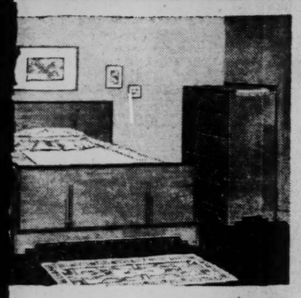

"While Mr. Mills was a member of the House, and a leader ir the last Republican administration as Cabinet member, he took the contrary view. The policy of the Republican party was to raise tariff so high that our foreign markets were destroyed to a large extent. I understand Mr. Mills thinks the NRA is a good thing."

Missouri Drainage Loans by RFC.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Two loans for the purpose of refinancing drainage districts in Missouri were announced today by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Seventeen thousand dollars goes to the Little River district, at Princeton, and $87,500 to the Union Township district, at La Grange. The loans are at 4 per cent. Altogether the RFC has now advanced more than $25,000,000 to drainage, irrigation and levee districts throughout the country.

IF YOU ASK MY OPINION

by MARTHA CARR

Letters intended for this column must be addressed to Martha Carr at the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Mrs. Carr will answer all questions of general interest, but, of course, cannot give advice on matters of a purely legal or medical nature. Those who do not care to have their letters published may enclose an addressed and stamped envelope for personal reply.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

SINCE I have finished high school I have been fortunate in having an office job which now pays enough for a comfortable living. But, living in a small town, I have no chance to get either a better job or a better education. Can you give me the name of a moderately-priced English book that I could buy? I have time to study at home and, since I correspond with several well-educated people and have visions of writing stories, I have already tried a few.

I am, according to friends, good-looking, have read much and have traveled over most of the United States and am interested in games and sports, so I do not lack for conversation.

At 30, I have had a few dates with many men, but now am afraid I have fallen in love, though the man has given me no reason to think he reciprocates. He is desirable for many reasons, likes cultural things, is reserved, but is good company. From the first day, I felt I had met the one and only man.

I, so afraid he would guess how much I thought of him, said I never expected to marry. I thought he really was probably thinking of some one else in his home.

I was called home suddenly on the visit during which I met him. I was excited and left unceremoniously. I sent him a note, however, apologizing for this. The note required no answer, but you cannot imagine my disappointment when none came. It will soon be a year, and he asks my friends frequently about me. I have promised to visit my friend again this summer; would it be a wise thing to do? If I see him, should I be so distant again?

COUNTRY-BRED.

Reading some of the older essays, is an excellent way to improve and make you use good English, unconsciously. If you wish to enlarge your vocabulary, enabling you to choose gracefully just the word to express your meaning and to give you fluency, get the old Richard Grant White books, "Words and Their Uses" and "Everyday English."

In answer to the second question, I would say to go by all means, and not be prudish and stand-offish with this man, who is possibly afraid of a rebuff.

Dear Martha Carr:

I AM invited to a college fraternity dance out of the city, and, of course, I know that you can help me. I will travel by automobile staying overnight at a hotel, and returning the following day, which will be Sunday. Just what shall I wear while traveling, and what shall I take along? The affair will be formal. Are gloves always worn with a formal gown? PUZZLED.

For the trip you would wear a good winter frock and topcoat, such as you would wear on the street here. You will, of course, need your formal evening gown for the dance and, possibly an evening wrap, if you have one. But many of the girls wear their fur coats or the street topcoat, if it is not too much on the sports wear, over their evening gowns.

In your bag pack your toilet articles, a change of underwear, your night clothes and a pair of bedroom shoes and light negligee—this not too elaborate to wear in the halls of the hotel in case you have no private bath. You can pack in an extra light-weight frock, if you think there might be some afternoon affair for which your street clothes would not be suitable. If you care to travel in a sports outfit, it would be all right, but remember about the necessity for an evening wrap. Gloves are little worn with formal evening dress now. Usually, if they are worn, they are removed when you start dancing, when you arrive or when refreshments are served. A light pair, not necessarily very long, may be worn with your wrap.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

IF you know someone who has a Boy Scout suit and who would like to give it away, I would appreciate having it very much, because I cannot afford to buy one. The size is 14. RAYMOND S.

I believe if you will ask at the headquarters, "Boy Scouts of America," Chemical Building, you might get one. Often boys who have outgrown their uniforms leave them there so that some smaller boy who cannot afford one may have it.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I WANT to see if you can help me out. I lost my sister some months ago and it seems I cannot yet get her off my mind. On that account I do not talk about her very much. I can hear her talk to me in my dreams as if she were living.

My sister and I were real buddies: we never went out without each other. I feel I am doing all in my power that can be done. She left a child 15 months old and I am raising it as she would. I have been married 12 years and have no childen of my own. Is it possible, Mrs. Carr, for two minds to concentrate in this way as one? Do you think that she would be calling for me to be with her? Some people say that when you dream of the dead, they need your prayers. My sister was sweet and good, and I don't see why she would need prayers said for her.

Well, I hope you can help me straighten this matter out, as I would feel a lot better to get an answer from you.

LONESOME PAL.

Dreams have had all kinds of interpretations by such psychologists as Sigmund Freud; by others who have thought they were psychic; by people who are merely superstitious and by all kinds of seers, mindreaders and fortune tellers. Psychiatrists and nerve specialists sometimes think it is a derangement of the nervous system. We know, though, that whatever makes us over-anxious in our daily life, more often than not reappears in our dreams, even in the dreams of children. So perhaps the fact that your sister was so much a part of your daily life and you live so much by your remembrance of her ideals and values, is the real cause of seeing her and dreaming you hear her voice. There is, I believe, nothing supernatural about it. And, as times goes on, it will be easier and you will be more reconciled to her going, think less about her and, in consequence, dream of her less.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM writing with reference to a letter which appeared in your column in which one of your readers offered the use of a microscope to someone in need of it. He mentioned that he would rent the instrument for a nominal fee.

I should like to be put in touch with the owner, as I am in great need of a microscope but cannot afford to buy one of my own. I am a student in the School of Medicine at the University of Missouri, and I find constant use for a microscope in my work. Next year I will be using one practically all the time, as I will be studying pathology.

I am sure that if you will be so kind as to forward this letter to the owner of the instrument, he and I will get in touch with each other and discuss any possible arrangements that can be made.

ROBERT W. K.

Through accident, the name and address of the gentleman who offered the use of this microscope has been lost (something that rarely occurs at this office). I would appreciate it very much if the name and address could be sent me again, as I have a number of correspondents wishing to take advantage of this offer.

Guiding Taste

THERE seems to be no unity of thought or action on what is suitable for the children to see and hear.

One group advocates reducing literature and the stage to a status where it is safe for the children, another is all for giving the children untrammeled freedom to see and read what they like.

In the one case the world would have to be adjusted to the moron, in the other, the undeveloped mind is forced beyond its capabilities. That there might be a middle way seems to have been forgotten.

The level of moron intelligence is seldom over 12 years, and the prospect of making the artistic world safe for them is appalling to the average adult.

Some educators are aware of the dangers of a too strong emotional diet for the young. Some, here and there, have studied the situation and instituted children's days at movie houses and theaters. Nearly every library has a children's department, bookstores grade their children's books according to age.

But in spite of all the effort which has been made, the children still flock to sophisticated plays and pictures, still read the frank, often broad book or paper of the moment, until the chief cry of the reformer is "We must censor!"

Much of what is written and produced is no doubt unnecessary and undesirable, but censoring merely drives it underground and increases its danger. If we allow our children unlimited license we spoil the children, if we attempt to suit all books and drama to their capacities we ruin art.

What we need far more is to pay attention to the children's development, to keep track of what they are seeing and hearing, and to start early to train their taste.

Mosques Almost Empty, Women Go Unveiled in Istanbul and the Harem Is Now Just A Showplace.

—By FRED C. KELLY—

CONSTANTINOPLE, or Istanbul, at first glimpse, tallies with one's notions of how it should look; minarets, domes and ancient walls, now ragged and broken suggesting the wear and tear of wars. But on the streets, with never a man wearing a fez and no veiled women, a visitor wonders if he is really in old Constantinople. Even though he knew the fez and veils are now forbidden by law, yet he somehow expected to see them.

But one finds them only in the old market on the Asiatic side of town where they may be bought, secondhand, as souvenirs, for a few piasters. Women who used to wear veils are now scampering about beaches and even in swimming pools in sketchy little bathing suits. Women are even allowed to vote and hold municipal offices.

Turkey has changed. The fez was just a symbol. Originally of Arabic origin, it had come to have religious significance. With the fez gone, the Moslems ceased to be conscious of being different. They quit being part of a religion and became part of a state.

When Mustapha Kemel Pasha, military hero, now President of the Turkish Republic, took power, he disposed of both sultan and caliph and separated church and state. Today the Moselm church in Turkey, once dominant, seems to be on the skids. In St. Sophia, biggest mosque on earth, with space for thousands of the faithful, I counted exactly 18 people at the height of the praying hour. One young Turk told me that with so few going to pray, mosques may some day become halls for symphony concerts.

One of the biggest changes came from doing away with the old Arabic alphabet of 480 letters. No wonder few could read. Imagine a child in kindergarten trying to memorize such an alphabet! Seldom could a child's fond parents proudly say to a visitor "You must hear little Abdul repeat his letters."

But in 1928 Turkey got itself a neat new Roman alphabet. It has no Q, W or X, but includes a C and S, each with a little tail attached, a G with an accent, and an I, O and U, each equipped with a pair of dots above it.

In this connection an American typewriter company showed a great stroke of enterprise. As soon as it got wind of the exact nature of the new alphabet it set to work. When the alphabet was publicly announced it had its machines in Turkey, with the correct characters, all ready to go on sale.

Soon after my arrival in Istanbul I met an American friend, who told me it had long been his ambition to inspect what was once the old Sultan's harem. He appreciated that this might have been difficult a few years ago; but today the public is permitted to look the place over. I told him I should be glad to go along with him, though I have always felt a little diffident about entering a harem.

We went, under escort of a Turkish guide, and I was astonished to discover the harem is a building not unlike many good clubs—a city clubhouse in a country club setting. One enters a small lobby where, presumably, in the old days, was an attendant to take one's hat and coat, just as in any well regulated club. But I observed no board on the wall for a list of members' names and little red pegs to note which members are in the building, in case of a telephone call. This would have been a needless gesture, inasmuch as there was never more than one member of this club.

My chief criticism of the harem arrangements is that there was a conspicuous inadequacy of space for outdoor exercise. The palace grounds were the size of a farm, yet it was not considered prudent to let permanent guests, or inmates, of the harem roam about at will. Instead, there was only one little yard, hardly 50 feet square, in which they might romp and play in the open air. As there were often 100 young women living in this club, I submit that it might not have been amiss to give them better provision for outdoor play.

PERHAPS, one reason why he did not mind having them sit about, putting on weight, was that he did not keep any one group with him for a long time. As our guide gravely explained, it was customary in the old days to keep the harem livened up by new faces. Competent scouts were always on the lookout for new material. Certain Circassian families in Georgia had built up a profitable trade by offering suitable candidates from time to time. Ordinarily, it was the Sultan's aim to have a complete change in the guest list every six months, and he seldom retained any of them longer than a year. His weeding out process was facilitated by marrying these young women off to army officers.

Today all that is changed. No longer does girlish laughter resound through the chambers of this neat little place, or club. Even marriage is on a new basis. Polygamy is forbidden, and a law passed in 1925 gives to the President, Kemal Pasha, power to grant divorces. By way of trying out the new law, the President promptly divorced his own wife, Latife Hanoum, then only 22 years old. She was a feminist and I have an idea asserted her own ideas more frequently than was best for domestic tranquillity.

Under new laws, no girl may marry under the age of 17 and anyone planning to marry must make public declaration of such intention 15 days in advance of the ceremony. Yet, notwithstanding this opportunity to verify how many wives a man already has, polygamy is still being practiced—though only among peasants. In country districts, men find monogamy somewhat impractical. Without an extra wife or two, they ask, who is going to work the farms?

Among the more well-to-do classes, however, polygamy is out. Indeed, most men of the upper social classes, whose women folk were expected to do no useful work, but to dress with proper elegance, were inclined to welcome the change. When a man has several wives, all clamoring for rare jewels and fashionable gowns, the expense sometimes becomes burdensome. Yet, when it was customary to have extra wives, as items of conspicuous waste, there was nothing a self-respecting man could do but try to keep up with the procession. Now, with the new law against polygamy, every man has an excellent excuse to have only one wife.

One thing in Turkey is just as represented in the old picture books. Men sit about smoking from long rubber tubes attached to a big central bowl of tobacco and water. In various cafes, one may rent the use of such an outfit for about eight cents an hour.

No country has prettier designs for coins than Turkey. Each coin is free from figures or dates to indicate that it is money; it looks more like a medal. A person could wear such a coin as a watch charm and pass it off as a reward for saving somebody from drowning or for being the best dressed man at an Elks' carnival.

One of the biggest surprises in Istanbul is finding that Turks look like other people. One somehow thinks of Turks as dark-skinned and of strong racial characteristics. Yet it is often easier to pick out an Italian from a crowd than to determine which one is a Turk. I was in the office of a steamship agency, in which an Englishman has a Turk for his chief assistant. Both were seated in the same room and I felt sure I could tell which was which. But the man I thought was the Turk proved to be the Englishman.

Turkey has contrived to have a balanced budget and a favorable balance of trade. In 1932 goods exported from Turkey amounted to more than $60,000,000 and imports were about $300,000 less than exports. Because of the immense amount of tobacco brought to the United States from Turkey total exports to this country are about five times the value of goods imported from the United States.

UNDER trade treaties with Austria and with France, Turkey requires each of these countries to buy 30 per cent more goods from Turkey than Turkey buys from them. But the treaties provide that this 30 per cent surplus in Austria or France must be left in that country to be used for buying goods later on, or for paying off debts.

About the only new type of buying I could discover in Turkey was in connection with modernizing tobacco warehouses. They intend to have modern air conditioning equipment in all such buildings.

Despite the favorable balance of trade, a vast amount of poverty still prevails in Turkey, particularly in Istanbul. One sees such heart-breaking sights as men acting as beasts of burden, walking all day with great loads on their backs that might strain a horse. While I was seated in a taxicab waiting for a friend, I noticed an undersized man with an immense basket on his back containing several bushels of vegetables, and piled on top was a huge fish that must have weighed 150 pounds. Bent over with his head down, the man bumped into the end of a wagon shaft and cut his face. He was obliged to lay down his burden and wash his face in a nearby fountain. Then he had difficulty getting the basket back into place again. I went to try to help him but could scarcely move the big basket. The taxicab chauffeur came to our aid, but still we could barely budge it. We called another bystander, and the three of us were needed to get that basket into place on the man's back. We estimated it weighed 700 pounds. Once the burden was properly adjusted on his back, he walked unconcernedly away. He told us he had already carried it nearly seven miles, and was on his way to the other end of the city. For his day's work, he would receive less than 35 cents.

surface by gravity, disasters kill only a few, at intervals.

If something happened—a wandering star, passing close to our solar system, an unusually heavy comet, powerful enough to stop or reverse the turning of the earth, the oceans would immediately flow over the earth one mile deep, in all but high mountainous regions, and practically every human being would be drowned.

We should be grateful in spite of earthquakes and flood. The earth is well managed.

Pierre S. du Pont, head industrial adviser of NRA, believes that agency "will do away with strikes," because NRA "provided an opportunity to deal with strikes in the way labor wants to deal with them."

Mr. du Pont is optimistic. The natural and permanent interest of the worker is to get as much as he can of what the employer takes in. The interest of the employer is to keep as much of it as he can. Strikes are by-products of that situation, and only Mussolini methods, which will not come here for the present, can deal with them.

The Rev. Dr. Kissling tells students of Florida University: "Public opinion is more often wrong than right, and the voice of the people is not the voice of God."

That would be difficult to prove, the voice of the people having had so rarely a chance to make itself heard. When did you last hear it? Dr. Kissling advises young men: "To stand against the wrong, to stand against the crowd, not to be moved by the pull and force of respectability," which is asking for a good deal. It is difficult for the chip to go against the stream into which it is thrown.

Scarce of Space

If you have a small amount of cupboard space for your pots and pans, screw a wire rack on the inside of each cupboard door. Pie pans, lids and flat frying pans may be tucked in these racks and give more space to the bulkier pots and pans.

Wicked Yellow Eyes

"BEFORE long," said Willy Nilly, "I must manage in some way to drag my automobile Two-Ways out of that snow bank where we were stuck before we visited Santa Claus. I haven't as yet finished putting the house in order; and if I put a new wick in an old lamp from the cellar we can have one to take the place of the lamp that was smashed in the storm.

"As it is now, we have to carry the upstairs lamp wherever we want to go in the house. Then I simply must not put off attending to my sticking-out, pointed ears."

"It tires me to hear of all you must do," said Christopher Columbus Crow. "I believe I'll fly around the countryside for a change."

"I do believe you'd work better if you were left to yourself," said Top Notch.

"I'll go over and hear what the news is in the next barnyard. After all, it is a treat for everyone when I go visiting, for I come back and tell the news."

"I might be of some help to you," said Rip. "But," he added quickly, as he longed for a romp, "I'd probably only be in the way."

"Yes," agreed Willy Nilly, "all of you go along and have a good time. Only don't get into trouble or I'll never finish my chores."

Willy Nilly fixed the lamp and made the place look fairly neat, but there was still a great deal to do. As it became dark he felt he had worked hard enough and was glad when the others came back for supper. Only Top Notch was very late and he came in trembling.

"Wicked yellow eyes," was all that he could say.

Take a Rest and Do Not Read This Article

FOLLOW the advice in the heading if you are tired of the three-bid and its workings, and if you think its advanced developments are too intricate and too seldom used to make it worth your while to explore them with me. However, students of the game who enjoy a little brain torture may appreciate an article on the following extremely delicate treatment which, in point of fact, actually occurred in a duplicate game.

With this hand, your response to your partner's opening bid of three hearts is, naturally, three no trumps. Now he bids four clubs. Your reply is, of course, four spades, showing both black kings and saving him the need of probing for the spade king in case that card should matter to him. Now HE BIDS FOUR NO TRUMPS. WHAT CAN HE MEAN BY THAT?

Plainly, you say, he is making an unusual appeal to my imagination and powers of deduction. What is it he wants to know that he cannot ask for by a direct question?

BEFORE YOU READ ANY FURTHER put the paper down and ask yourself what you would conclude from his four no trump bid—which, of course, you are forbidden to pass—and what you would reply.

NOW THAT YOU HAVE SOLVED THE MYSTERY, let us go over the evidence in logical order. Here are the data. Let us think aloud.

First. Opener knows I have no ace.

Second. He knows that I have both black kings.

Third. He does not require information about the diamond suit; he already knows I have not got the ace. If he needed to know about the king, he could so easily call for it by bidding five diamonds. If I had to deny it, it would be by bidding five hearts, a contract which I make safe by supplying the king of clubs which he first called for and which I have shown.

Fourth. Therefore he is not interested in any ace or king of these suits. Consequently the field is narrowed to two possibilities.

THE FIRST POSSIBILITY is that he is seeking information about the trump suit; not the ace, as we all know, for that matter was disposed of on the first round. Is he asking me to bid six hearts if I have the king or queen? Maybe—but the regular way of doing this would be for him to bid either five or six hearts, urging me to give a raise if I had the king or queen of trumps. That would be so easy for him, that would be the most direct method, since I have told him so much and he evidently has no other direct question to put to me. If this should be the case, at least I supply an entry in clubs and three trumps (making nine between us, at least) which should enable him to take a trump finesse if he does not care to play for a drop. So if the mysterious question concerns trumps, I will give him something to work with though I have no high trump. However, this possibility is not nearly so likely as the only other alternative, which is that THE OPENING BIDDER IS ACTUALLY CALLING FOR A QUEEN and that in one of the black suits, since the diamond suit does not interest him. This was actually the case. Responder correctly analyzed his partner's motives and bid five spades to show that queen, having already denied its ace and showed his king. He felt also that the hand was already probably safe at six, and even if he was wrong on both points and partner needed only a trump honor from him, he supplied three trumps to facilitate a finesse or drop. On hearing the response of five spades, the opening bidder now contracted for a grand slam in hearts, and spread his hand after the first trick had been played. It was, as you have by now surely reconstructed it

The spade and club holdings might have been interchanged. Both black kings having been shown by the responder, either black queen produces a sure grand slam.

STATE HOSPITAL PATIENTS GIVE A CIRCUS

Unique Experiment in Mental Therapy Results in Entertaining Show in Illinois Institution.

— By S. R. McCULLOCH —

OUT of the shadows of isolation into the sunshine of the mystic land of make-believe patients at Anna State Hospital recaptured last week the glamour of a world once thought forever ended.

For the hospital had a circus—such a circus as the little Illinois town had never seen before. Held in a tan-bark ring, transforming the familiar assembly hall, the show, complete from clowns to peanuts, was for and largely by the patients.

Participating also were employes and townspeople, eager to make it a community affair and insure its objective of sheer amusement. Hundreds of other patients attended, most had a hand in its preparation, all talked of little else for days before the event.

Many whose interest in life seemed sluggish manifested a zest hitherto lacking. And the expressions on the faces of the patients in the audience as the program proceeded to the tune of a patients' band attested to the success of its underlying purpose as an experiment in practical therapy.

All of the time-honored events of a genuine "big top" were presented with a few new ones thrown in. There was even a man—a dummy, this time—shot from the mouth of a cannon with a satisfying "boom."

Spangles and sawdust, barkers and ballyhoo, side shows and a "congress of wild west riders" contributed to the lure of illusion, part and parcel of circuses since time immemorial. And the show, a full two hours in length, with 16 acts, accomplished something the Ringling brothers themselves might envy. It was produced for less than $10.

Costumes for the cast of 120 were made at the hospital from discarded materials, many of them in the French room, where patients select clothes of designs of their own choosing. Animals—giraffes, elephants, camels, roaring beasts of the jungle—were constructed of burlap with startling realism. Sometimes several patients would furnish the unseen motive power of a ponderous pachyderm. Again, a glittering, writhing dragon concealed within its shimmering skin a dozen high-school youngsters.

Dignified doctors, disguised as cowboys and exotic creatures from far countries, cut capers. Clowns, some of them patients, fairly outdid themselves, now and then taking a fall out of the doctors. A feminine artist of the "high wire," pink tights and all, moved gracefully through her act as the band played the kind of waltz that accompanies such acts in tents the country over.

True, the wire walker, daughter of a physician, didn't trust herself to such a frail support. She walked a board instead, but did it so gracefully it seemed like the real thing. And the lady lion tamer drew breathless attention even if she did stick her head into the mouth of an imitation lion.

CLEVERLY presented, some of the acts were true burlesque, a few originated by patients. A Russian ballet, with men in incongrous garb as the dancers, afforded a parody which many a theater-going husband might appreciate. A bull fight with an agile toreador constituted a lively episode.

Slowly the "strong man," a patient, lifted weights, struggling as dramatically to the roll of the drums as though the painted figures on the weights—up to 2500 pounds—told the truth. The ringmaster, still another patient, announced the events in approved sonorous fashion.

Nor were all the facts mere make-believe. A group of living statues, for instance, posed in white immobility was of professional effectiveness. And once, with a voice strangely sweet, a woman sang. A few years ago she was a vaudeville headliner. Today she is a patient and in the spotlight last Friday she sang with a joy that caused one physician to remark was in itself worth the effort of putting on the show.

Therapeutic value of the performance, said Dr. R. A. Goodner, superintendent of the institution, was based not only on the participation of patients but in the interest it aroused among the 2000 men and women there, taking them out of themselves and making them eager to give their fellow patients a good time.

Many of those unable to help in dyeing and tinting the elaborate costumes watched intently as the work was going on, caught a pride of accomplishment that resulted in a noticeable advance in the morale of the institution.

Citizens of the community, too, have come to realize that the hospital is not a thing set apart but a part of the community they may help develop by aiding in some of its therapeautic experiments—representing a policy which is destroying "institutionalism" and has attracted the attention of alienists all over the country.

So the "big show" wasn't just another entertainment thrust at the patients. It was their show and they took pride in it—the very evidence of pride a step forward.

"The circus, like certain other activities here," Dr. Goodner said, "serves also to prevent deterioration. When a patient's interest is once aroused his condition is less apt to grow worse. It may improve."

INTEREST of the audience never wavered from the time of the "grand entry" until the last cowboy had whooped about the ring astride a spotted wooden pony. Nor did it fail to catch the point of the quips of the clowns, re-acting generally to the acts as quickly as did numerous guests who crowded into the hall.

No sooner had the big show ended when the shouts of the side show barkers almost drowned out vendors of pink lemonade and peanuts. Exhibited in more than a score of tents were such spectacles as "the human skeleton, count his bones," "Madame Salems—she slings snakes" and "Dainty and Petit Arabella."

The lollipop sisters were there, too. So also was a "Wild Man of Borneo," unrecognizable as a staid—save for that night—elderly psychiatrist. Mae West—not in person—was a modern note.

The show, remarkable also because everything was free, even to the lemonade, was produced after about three weeks of intensive work. It was under the direction of Miss Betty Snyder, a former Cleveland newspaper woman and head now of the recreational and therapy department at the hospital.

Most of the costuming—including the creation of the menagerie—was prepared in the French room, described in the Post-Dispatch last summer, under the supervision of Mrs. Mary B. Whyte, its director. Mrs. Whyte arranged also the living statues, posing herself as Diane, the huntress, bow and arrow in hand.

It was a gay performance, a jolly evening with a genuine merriment that made even the patients forget for a few hours that they were patients. Certain barriers—therapy at Anna already proving some of them imaginary — were broken down. It created an atmosphere akin to normalcy.

Nor were those whose condition did not permit of attendance at the circus deprived of its pleasures. The circus came to them later. Clowns, ballet dancers, flip-flopping acrobats and all paraded through the wards. As in the case of the others, no undue excitement was observed. Patients received the performance in a healthy, normal fashion. Their interest, in fact, was keener than that of most crowds.

Apart from all other rewards, the smiles and laughter of men and women who had almost forgotten how to laugh, repaid the sponsors of the show. Once again the outside world—appreciated to the full only by those who no longer may enjoy it—was brought to the hospital. And the big show may become a permanent institution.

EVERYDAY RELIGION

No More Sinners?

By THE REV. JOSEPH FORT NEWTON

SIN, they say, is out of date. It is obsolete, defunct, as dead as the Dodo. We have only inhibitions, complexes, neuroses, and the like. The mind is merely a machine. We are no more responsible for what we think or do than we are for the color of our eyes.

It sounds awfully smart, but it is actually silly. Such a philosophy saws off the limb on which it sits. If there is no sin, there is no virtue. If there is no error, there is no truth. Religion becomes a fiction, science a fantasy. All thought ends in a blur, a blank!

Our ideas may be addled, but we are not ready to resign our intelligence. Morals are muddy today, but we decline to surrender our moral sense. To call old sins by big new names does not alter the facts. When we do it, something deep within us tells us it is not so.

Nor is that all. When men talk like that society begins to rot and totter. Men cease to l men and the world rots. Love becomes lust, idealism sinks to cynicism, and the animal in us kills the spirit. If you doubt it, look about you, or read the daily paper.

In the story of each day we see the same old things going on, as in all the past. Hate, envy, greed, dishonesty, murder, and every kind of vileness is reflected as in a mirror. No clever trick of words, no cute turn of thought, can erase these stains from human life.

Sin is missing the mark, as the word means. It is as when an archer shoots at a target. Something deflects his aim and his arrow goes wild. But at least he tries to shoot straight. He has an ideal set up to be hit. He does not lay down his bow, put out the lights, and wander in the dark without goal or guide, as we are told to do.

At any rate our fathers were honest. They admitted that they were "miserable sinners," and sought the mercy of God. They read the Bible, and that wise old book uses short, sharp words. It tells us that if we say we have no sin, we lie, and thus add sin to sin.

It is better to be an honest sinner than to turn ourselves into moral morons by denying the reality of the moral life!

Ten articles, specially selected by Doctor Newton as being the most outstanding so far published in this series, have been reprinted in an attractive booklet.

This booklet will be sent without cost to interested readers. Requests should be addressed to Dr. Joseph Fort Newton, St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Knitting Is Back!

A MAN writes: My question concerns this knitting business, which the female sex has again taken up after a lapse of some years. I think the "come-back" of knitting is one of the finest things that has happened in this modern age. Besides being an enjoyable and quiet pastime for the girls, it is also an economical movement, since good sweaters, socks, shirts and other things can be made cheaper than the same quality can be purchased. But here is the point that defeats all the advantages:

Groups of girls are taking their knitting everywhere they go; even to meetings. The other night there were at least 25 girls at our Sunday School Association meeting who were knitting—which to me, as a speaker, was very annoying. So much so that gradually I felt more and more insulted as I found that the audience did nothing to help me put my message across.

My answer: I hope you won't think me unfeeling if I find it unreasonable to demand that the audience keep its eyes on the speaker. I myself spoke to several hundred women not long ago, among whom were an appreciable number who were knitting busily throughout my talk. I am afraid I am less modest than you are, because it did not occur to me that I ought to feel insulted. After all, had they not wanted to hear me speak, they would not have come to hear me!

If I were to write about things annoying to a speaker, I would rather include rattling programs and coughing and smoking (which makes me cough). Perhaps the reason I don't mind knitting is that I have read aloud to knitters far too often at home to feel that those who knit are withholding their attention. This does not mean that you are wrong in objecting to knitters if they annoy you; in fact, were I speaking in your place, I think I would probably say, in the most beseeching voice I could muster, "Dear ladies, would you mind very much putting your work away, because the movement of your knitting needles really disturbs me!" After all, I feel sure if they knew how much you were distressed they would not knit in your presence ever again! In fact, it is for this reason that I print your letter.

Tomato Sauce

(Suitable for Meats or Fish)

Two cups tomatoes,
One bay leaf,
Two whole cloves,
One onion slice,
One-half teaspoon salt,
One-half teaspoon sugar,
One-quarter teaspoon pepper,
Two tablespoons butter,
Three tablespoons flour.

Mix tomatoes and seasonings. Cover and cook 10 minutes. Strain well. Melt butter and add flour. When mixed add tomato mixture and boil one minute.

Food Proportions

If you have decided on scrambled eggs as refreshments for an informal evening party allow an egg and a half to each guest, three strips of bacon and two rolls apiece. If you're serving potato salad five quarts will be needed for 25 guests. For this number you'll need at least a pound and a half of ground coffee. Five quarts of chicken salad will be sufficient for 50 people. And if you're making sandwiches for 50 people you will need three loaves of bread.

Ham and Sweet Potatoes.

Cut a slice of smoked ham into pieces convenient for serving. Broil on both sides and cover the bottom of a casserole with the pieces. Spread with slices of raw, sliced sweet potatoes until the casserole is almost full. Then add one cup hot water and two tablespoons melted butter, sprinkling over the top two tablespoons sugar. Place lid on dish and bake slowly until the ham is tender, basting occasionally with the gravy.

Right now when he's building his bones and teeth . . . give Bottled Sunshine!

You can't afford to deny your baby this regular help. Not if you want him to have a well-shaped head . . . a strong back . . . a fine, full chest . . . straight legs . . . sound, even teeth . . .

To build them, he needs the protective bone-and-tooth building factor, Vitamin D.

Some Vitamin D he gets from the sun. But sunshine cannot be counted on to supply very much. There are too many dark, cloudy, foggy days.

Regularly, every day, in addition, he should have Bottled Sunshine—good cod-liver oil. Not only does Bottled Sunshine help your baby build sound bones and teeth, but it helps him grow and increases his resistance. It supplies the important growth and resistance-building factor, Vitamin A.

And good cod-liver oil, like Squibb's, can be depended on to supply an abundance of both Vitamins A and D. It costs less to use Squibb's. Give this superior oil to your baby. At any good drug store. E. R. Squibb & Sons, manufacturing chemists since 1858

The Lone WOLF'S Son

—By—

LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE.

"ALL very bright and sarcastic," Isquith agreed. "But why, may one ask, if your son wanted to speak to you, why did he stop at the door out there—why, when he knew us all, didn't he walk right in to see you?"

"Imagine, if you can, that Maurice might possibly have had something private to say to me."

"I'm imagining it—without a struggle."

"He was pressed for time as it happened, and probably thought to avoid being delayed by farewells and explanations."

"'Farewells'?" Tess Boyce with this echo made her voice heard for the first time since the ring had turned up missing; and something throaty in its timber, a huskiness of newly excited emotion, struck Lanyard's ear as curious. "What d'you mean, 'farewells'? Where's he going, for a swim or something?"

"My son, madame, decided at the last minute to anticipate our arrival in America—"

"Listen."

A lifted hand enjoined attention; and upon the hush that answered it, an instant of speechless suspense stressed by the muffled rumor of engines choked down to half-speed or less, and by a complete cessation of the slough of water down the side, the drone of an airplane fell like long-drawn thunder.

"The mail-plane!" Tess Boyce started to her feet. "You mean he's flying? What came over him all of a sudden?"

"Does it matter, madame?"

"Why—I suppose it doesn't." She seemed to grasp for the first time that her excitement might give rise to wonder. "I was surprised, that's all; it seemed so sudden—"

"I don't imagine Maurice would mind my telling you what you must surmise for yourself as soon as you know the name of the other air-passenger." Lanyard kept close though covert watch for an inkling of the woman's ill-dissembled emotion, but found it quite beyond his fathoming. What the devil, the man mused. It couldn't be that she was distressed by any sentimental feeling. What then—in the name of reason? "Mademoiselle Crozier, so Maurice told me, wheedled her mother into consenting to the adventure; and he was enterprising enough to decide, on the spur of the moment, to go with her."

The thunder rolled till it became a sustained thick bellow, struck a new, less impatient note, and went into a swift dwindle as a cheer from the decks attested a successful take-off.

"Well, anyway," Isquith observed with a dry chuckle, "there, Your Highness—or my guess is a bad miss—there goes your ruby."

But the Rajah made no articulate answer. Exasperation had him by the throat and was visibly shaking him. He stuttered and thrashed the air in an attempt to express the unspeakable. And before he could refind his tongue, one of his suite was announcing:

"The Captain Sahib."

THE tedious time that Lanyard subsequently spent in limbo was relieved by nothing except the attentions of a taciturn steward till the Navarre had made halt at Quarantine and gathered way for the short last lap to her dock. Then, nearing one end of his new quarters, whose length he had taken to prowling for want of a better way to work off the ferment of pent temper, the man heard a small noise behind him and came smartly about, to discover that the door had been softly opened and an unannounced caller admitted: Crane, whom Lanyard had not seen since the American detective's friendly warning of inimical influences, stood observing him quizzically.

"Well, you're a sight I never looked to see—the Lone Wolf in the hoosegow! It took me quite a while to dope out what had become of you, but once I knew, I just had to shill in for a stare at the exhibit! I've got to hand it to friend Plon: he ain't no ordinary dick. Far be it from him to advertise he'd just pulled the showiest pinch of the season; for all that us passengers knew about it, you might simply have done a nose-dive into the wake."

"But Madame Boyce knew—and the Rajah, and Isquith!"

"Believe it or not, fella, that lot never let out a peep. I had to do a good piece of snoopin' before I got the low-down."

"Your success there doesn't surprise me so much as that you contrived by any means to persuade Plon to let you visit me."

"Yeah? I'd be a gay dick, wouldn't I, if I told you all my girlish secrets? I wangled it, and that's all you're goin' to know about it just at present. What's more to the point is to find out how you got framed like this, and what I can do to spring you before this good ship sails back with you to that dear France."

"You are a good fellow, my friend," Lanyard protested, as Crane made himself at home in a chair; "but I am afraid there is nothing. . . . Let me tell you."

He succinctly related the tale of his afternoon at cards and its upshot:

"Plon, I must confess, surprised me by showing some disposition to give me a chance. It was the Captain who wouldn't listen to reason; a mean creature, that one, all in a fever to truckle to His Honey-colored Highness. Not that our good Plon was noticeably downcast by the ultimatum that brought me to this pass."

"NO! No kiddin'? Still and all, I shouldn't wonder if you're right, at that: it's the Cap'n that's the polecat. Mean to say he wouldn't give you any break at all? Wouldn't even frisk the others for the ruby? Looks like there must be something besides plain cussedness behind the way he's actin'."

"I assure you he took Isquith's kind conjecture as if it might have been inspiration from on high, took it for granted that nobody else could possibly have made away with the ruby and I had passed it on to Maurice—even went so far as to promise he would arrange by wireless to have Maurice searched to the skin upon landing. And there is another matter that perplexes me beyond measure."

"What?"

Lanyard handed the detective a sheet of creased paper.

"A radio from my son announcing his safe arrival. Observe, if you please, that it was written in high spirits: the boy was delighted with his adventure and enchanted with America—it conveys not a hint of any unpleasantness encountered on landing."

"I don't see any reason why it should have. Chances are he took his reception as pretty much what any pesky foreigner had to expect of our customs officials. And seein' as he didn't have any rubies on him, the experience couldn't have turned out unpleasantly."

"It depends, I dare say, on what the Captain actually wirelessed in comparison with what he promised. The impression he plainly gave was that he meant to have Maurice held under arrest, even if the ruby were not found on him, pending our arrival."

"Maybe he had an attack of second-thought. You know how these frogs are—when they're all excited up, they'll promise hell and all, but they generally calm down and think things over before they let themselves in for anything that might have serious consequences."

SYNOPSIS

Aboard the S. S. "Navarre," bound for New York, Michael Lanyard, reformed "Lone Wolf" and underworld celebrity, is reunited with his son whom he thought dead. The boy "Maurice Perry," has followed in the "Lone Wolf's" footsteps, but Lanyard hopes his son's interest in Fenno Crozier, lovely daughter of the wealthy Mrs. Fay Crozier, will prove a good influence. Maurice steals Mrs. Crozier's Habsburg emeralds. Lanyard retrieves them for Fay. Detective Crane warns Lanyard to watch out for the vengeance of "Jack Knife" Anderson and "English Archie," two gunmen whom Lanyard exposed for cheating Maurice at cards. Shortly afterwards, the gangsters steal Mrs. Crozier's emeralds and plant them in Lanyard's cabin. Maurice saves his father by substituting imitations and secretly placing the emeralds in the purser's care for Fay. Notwithstanding Lanyard's innocence, Detective Plon is suspicious of him. Later, when one of "Jack Knife's" accomplices tries to intimidate Lanyard into stealing the emeralds and splitting fifty-fifty with the gang, Maurice appears on the scene, masked. He knocks the gangster unconscious, planting a string of pearls stolen from the notorious gold-digger, Tess Boyce, in the thug's pocket. Tess, in gratitude to Maurice for catching the thief, gives a dinner in his honor. Lanyard disapproves of the society of Tess Boyce for his son, but Fenno asks him to leave Maurice to her. Discussing the Boyce robbery, Plon informs Lanyard that the prisoner swore Lanyard and Maurice planted the necklace on him. M. Isquith, Tess' companion, compliments her on her progress with Maurice and Lanyard, adding that "they will have them where they want them." Crane is suspicious of Tess' interest in Maurice. He surmises the truth about the Boyce robbery. Crane overhears Tess tell Maurice that Lanyard's reform was just elocution. The detective warns Lanyard to keep his son away from her. Fearing another attempt will be made to steal the emeralds, Lanyard advises Fay to arrange for their protection when the boat docks. A ruby ring belonging to the Rajah of Ladore disappears during a bridge game, and Lanyard is accused of its theft.

SEEN in THE STORES

By SYLVIA

EVERY day is Christmas to the designers of boudoir accessories, judging by the new items that have arrived in the stores since the holiday season. Mirrored boxes are noteworthy among these. Three types are included among the collections—one designed to hold cleansing tissues, another with drawers for little knickknacks, and a third that is a make-up box.

If Eve had possessed one of those scented soap apples goodness knows what would have become of Adam. Other fruits such as citron are represented but the apple is the most tempting of the lot. Each is cut in slices like the famous chocolate apple and wrapped in cellophane. Artificial leaves are supplied to contribute to the illusion of reality.

A famous perfumer is said to get the credit for a fascinating scented bath ball. This is of chromium plated metal and hangs by a chain. The idea is to put a few drops of bathoil inside and swing it vigorously for a second or two over your tub of water. Metal ball and a small bottle of oil come attractively boxed and ready for use.

Among other items of a gift nature noted in the shops are lovely raffia and lacquered trays. Some are round, some square and some oval in shape. The raffia forms part of the gallery as well as serving to introduce a decorative note. You can take your choice of red, green or black.

Trays call for contents and contents call for careful mixing. To supply this last essential don't overlook a new cocktail book. One hundred famous cocktails are included between its covers and they are credited to Oscar of the Waldorf who collaborated in preparation of this book. Something of the romance of liquors and of the etiquette of service gives you more for your money.

If you're in the market for a set of coasters you can't do better than to select the lacquered ones that combine maroon and gold. The backgrounds are of the deep tone of red and the gilt is introduced in central flower designs. Six of these come in a matching container. Eight others in the same color scheme have no box to keep them intact, but they have strutting cocks for decoration.

The most artful lady of the season has arrived to see that the amateur gardener gets the right start this spring. She is called the "Garden Lady," is made of raffia and is in reality a stick. An apron of printed calico ties about her slender waist. In its pockets you'll find a pair of shears and a sturdy pencil for marking your plants. Her hair comes out—one strand at a time—and is to be used for tying the flowers.

Natural colored crash linen sets would be dull breakfast companions if it were not for their decorations of bright colored yarn. With these gay trimmings they are sufficiently festive to appear at luncheon and even at dinner. The wool threads are drawn through the wide hems and at every corner they branch out into elaborate flowers.

Salad should never stand for a long time after preparing it. If it must be arranged in advance, put the plates right back in the refrigerator until meal time. There is nothing so uninteresting as a warm, wilted salad.

LISTEN, WORLD!

by Elsie Robinson

Justice Is What We Make It

(Copyright, 1934.)

SHE'S asking the oldest, perhaps the bitterest question in life: "IS JUSTICE REALLY JUSTICE?"

You've asked that question, too, haven't you—with just such heat and bitterness? Particularly if you've ever tangled with our courts.

ELSIE ROBINSON

If so, how many hours have you spent telling your unfortunate friends that there wasn't any justice anyway— nothing but mockery and corruption?

But you were wrong — just as wrong as the rosy idealists who expect this half-baked way-station to be a rose-wreathed Garden of Eden.

IS JUSTICE REALLY JUSTICE? OF COURSE IT ISN'T.

LIKE EVERYTHING ELSE IN OUR IMPERFECT HUMAN LIFE, JUSTICE IS WHAT WE MAKE IT.

Justice isn't a divine ideal and program transplanted, in toto, from the heavenly archives into our murky human affairs. It's a dream of fair dealing—a vision, still vague and muddled, of something taller and finer than our selfishness, cruelty, stupidity and greed. And in just the proportion that we are able to express that dream, we have justice.

Often you're appalled or enraged at the cowardice or crookedness of judges, the stupidity of juries, the inadequacy of our laws. You say these conditions are abominable. They are. But don't lose faith in civilization because of that.

THE WONDER IS THAT WE HAVE ANY JUSTICE AT ALL, AS YET.

For we are still such a little way removed from savagery. We have so many generations of stark brutality behind us, when the only possible system was the brute system of "dog eat dog." And we're still savage inside; many of us little better than baboons. So that justice is still not only rare and miraculous, but actually a dangerous thing.

It is a dangerous thing to try to be fair in this selfish, struggling world. It is dangerous to trust people; dangerous to give the other fellow an equal chance. The just man is bound to be misunderstood, considered a fool and taken advantage of.

And the honest judge who tries to dispense justice is not dealing with absolute right and wrong, with 100 per cent good people, 100 per cent bad people. He is dealing with a bewildering mixture of goodness and badness, strength and weakness. No law on earth can tell him how to solve that mystery perfectly, nor is there sufficient understanding in his undeveloped spirit. He must simply do the best he can, and his best must inevitably fall short of the ideal.

So the wonder isn't that we have so little justice, but that we have any at all.

And if you really want to fight the injustice of the world, there is just one thing to do—stop crabbing at bungling judges, and juries, and ineffective laws, and GET BUSY ON YOURSELF. FOR JUSTICE IS AS GREAT AS OUR OWN DESIRE TO EXPRESS IT!

Administration critics are annoyed because the government is loaning money to Tennessee Valley residents to buy electric appliances—refrigerators, toasters, curling irons, etc.

Perhaps the Administration is slyly approaching a point where it will finance electrical refrigerators to keep Republicans cool.

The Lamar Night club opened Saturday evening. At least a hundred couples were present. Bobby Jones' orchestra furnished music. It was a gay crowd. They sat about the tables and visited. A good sized crowd of natives stood on the sidewalk and looked in at the big windows, watching the crowd, observing the dancing, calculating whether the dancers had been taking anything stronger than "sody."

FAMOUS LAST WORDS
This is genuine pre-repeal stuff!

Let's EXPLORE Your MIND
By ALBERT EDWARD WIGGAM, D. Sc.

See Whether His Opinions Agree With Your Own

AUTHOR'S NOTE: These answers are given from the scientific point of view. Science puts the rights of organized society above the rights of individuals.

1. We have no exact statistics on this but we may reason that a rather higher proportion of such women are happier than the wives of us everyday, garden variety of males, because men of genius are somewhat better balanced mentally and stronger and healthier physically than the average of mankind. And we also know that divorced men are on the average, more unstable mentally and physically than men who remain married. Anyhow, I wouldn't refuse a man in marriage just because he was a genius if I were a woman and took a shine to him.

2. Yes, fame among his fellows. Psychologists generally agree that the desire to be important, to gain the approval of others is the deepest, most permanent motive in human nature. When a man loses this motivation his future is behind him.

3. Certainly, because the "fortunes" predicted are always optimistic. After eating my lunch recently in a drug store I weighed myself and received the following: "You always make a good impression on women by your generosity and are a favorite with brunettes." Of course I knew that, but it was especially gratifying to have it confirmed from such a reliable scientific source. It helped my lunch digest. We naturally like praise from the humblest beggar—or slot machine—even if we know it is "phoney," because we try unconsciously to "kid" ourselves into thinking that "after all may be there is something in it."

3 RUSSIANS KILLED ON RECORD TRIP IN BALLOON

Stratosphere Explorers Who Had Ascended 12.79 Miles Crash to Earth When Metal Gondola Breaks Loose.

BODIES RECOVERED, APPARATUS SMASHED

Eye-Witnesses Report Two Explosions — Investigating Commission Leaves for Scene of the Disaster, Southeast of Moscow.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MOSCOW, Jan. 31.—It was officially announced this afternoon that the three Russian stratosphere explorers who set a new unofficial balloon altitude record of 12.79 miles yesterday were flung to earth and killed soon afterward when the metal gondola of their balloon became detached from the gas bag.

The accident occurred near the village of Potiisoy-Ostrogg, several hundred miles southeast of Moscow. Formal announcement was deferred until the Communist party congress assembled here at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Official Statement Made.

M. Ulikedzie, a member of the Government Police Bureau, appeared before the congress and made the following statement:

"On Jan. 30, between 3:30 and 5 p. m., at the village of Potiisoy-Ostrogg, eight kilometers south of the Kotoshkino Station in the Insarovo district and the Mordovskaya region, several hundred kilometers southeast of Moscow, the stratostat broke away from the balloon and hit the earth.

"Under the shock the balloon rose and disappeared.

"Eye-witnesses reported two explosions were heard at the time of the crash.

"In the gondola three bodies were found, one of which was mutilated beyond recognition.

"All of the scientific instruments and everything inside was smashed.

"A special commission of investigation has left Moscow for the scene of the catastrophe."

First Explanation of Disaster.

Ulikedzie's announcement was the first explanation of the disaster which overtook the balloonists as they were attempting to descend in a heavy fog after setting the new record and making valuable observations on meteorological conditions and the activity of cosmic rays in the stratosphere.

The crash occurred in an isolated, sparsely inhabited area, accounting for the lapse of time before news of the disaster reached Moscow.

The last word received from the balloon was that the balloonists were trying to make a descent near Columna, but a search of the region, about 75 miles from Moscow, proved fruitless.

The stratosphere explorers radioed yesterday that they had reached an altitude of 67,585 feet, or 12.79 miles.

In the absence of any other explanation it was presumed that the crew released too much gas in order to let the balloon down, then had too little ballast left to lighten the weight of the one and one-half ton craft when the men found it was dropping too fast. The natural contraction of the hydrogen with which the big envelope was filled as it neared the earth and the lack of warmth from the sun, which served as an expanding agency, may have accentuated this difficulty.

Official Summary of Flight.

The official account of the ill-fated flight, as published by local newspapers today, follows in summary:

The takeoff was made at 9:07 a. m. Tuesday.

The flyers were clothed in electrically-heated suits when they entered the gondola, which was dedicated as "a present" to the Seventeenth All-Union Communist party Congress now in session.

As the balloon left the ground Fedeseemko leaned from an open porthole and shouted: "Long live the Seventeenth Party Congress; long live the world revolution!"

A small crowd of civil and military officials stood by and cheered. Two minutes later the balloon disappeared into the fog.
